In response to the proposed expansion of enrollment options to the TSA Pre Application, I must highly object. I have no desire for my 'customer experience' to be 'enhanced for your vetting purposes.' I am not a 'customer' of the US Government - rather, I am a CITIZEN of the United States of America and as such, have rights afforded my by the US Constitution to be the arbiter of my personal data and identifiable features.

As a TSA-Pre enrollee and frequent air traveler, TSA has already been given access to an over-abundance of my biographic identifying data - name, address, phone, social security number, birthplace for me AND both my parents - to 'assure the safety' of our airports, planes, and borders. The proposed requirement to now have and keep on file my fingerprints and other biometric data is preposterous. For over two decades, as proven by the minimal number of instances of violence carried out in the air and in our airports (I cannot count on more than one hand the number since 9/11), the US government has been able to assess a traveler's risk at our airports and borders through a search of the already provided aforementioned biographic data. Everyone traveling via air or crossing our two international borders must present a valid Real ID for TSA & Border Patrol agents to scan into a federal data base for flagging and identification. Anyone applying for TSA-Pre privileges pays for the federal government to do an FBI background search in order to deem them a 'low-risk' traveler and thus afford them the convenience of not having to remove their laptop/liquids from their carry-on when entering an airport's 'sterile' areas.

I can assure you, the enrollment to the TSA-Pre Check program will not grow - 'an average of 8,384,125 over 3 years' SERIOUSLY? - but rather decline dramatically if these dystopian measures requiring biometric data are implemented. This is yet another attempt of government overreach at the expense of my personal, constitutional freedoms and I will be sending these same objections to my US Senators and Representative.
