- Temporary Protected Status (TPS) Travel Authorization Documents;
- Advance Parole Documents;

Installation of Travel Documents

Any travel document obtained by making a materially false representation or concealment in this application will be invalid. Any travel document will also be invalid if you are ordered removed or deported from the United States.

In addition, a Refugee Travel Document will be invalid if the United Nations Convention of July 28, 1951, ceases to apply or does not apply to you as provided in Articles 1C, D, E, or F of the Convention.

Reentry Permits

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) may issue a Reentry Permit to a lawful permanent resident or a conditional permanent resident, which allows them to apply for admission to the United States (coming from abroad during the permit's validity without the need to obtain a returning resident visa from a U.S. Embassy or U.S. Consulate. If we approve Form I-131, filed by a lawful permanent resident or conditional permanent resident seeking a Reentry Permit, we will issue a Reentry Permit.

Refugee Travel Documents

DHS may issue a Refugee Travel Document to a noncitizen in valid refugee or asylee status, or to a lawful permanent resident who obtained such status as a direct result of their status as a refugee in the United States, so that they may seek admission upon their return from a trip abroad. In addition, noncitizens who hold refugee or refugee status and are not lawful permanent residents may use a Refugee Travel Document to reenter the United States after traveling abroad unless they possess an Advance Parole Document. If we approve a Form I-131 filed by a noncitizen in valid refugee or asylee status (or a lawful permanent resident who obtained such status as a direct result of refugee or asylee status), we will issue a Refugee Travel Document. A Refugee Travel Document also authorizes them to seek admission upon their return from a trip abroad.

A DHS officer at the Port of entry will determine the noncitizen's admissibility when they present their Refugee Travel Document upon return from their trip abroad.A DHS officer at the Port of entry will determine the noncitizen's admissibility when they present their Refugee Travel Document upon return from their trip abroad.

Travel Authorization Documents for TPS Beneficiaries Inside the United States

DHS may grant discretionary travel authorization to noncitizens who have been granted TPS. If we approve Form I-131 for a TPS beneficiary seeking travel authorization, we will issue Form I-512T, Travel Authorization Document (TAD). A TPS beneficiary who has been granted TPS may convert to their travel outside the United States under the Immigration and Nationalization Act (INA) section 244(f)(3). DHS will determine at inspection whether you may be admitted into TPS. If you travel and return in accordance with your TPS travel authorization and your TPS remains valid, you will be admitted into TPS as long as you are not inadmissible for certain criminal or security grounds that are mandatory ineligibility grounds for TPS.

Advance Parole Document for Noncitizens Who Are Currently Inside the United States and Advance Permission to Travel for CNMI Long-Term Residents

DHS may, as a matter of discretion, issue an Advance Parole Document under the general parole authority of INA section 212(d)(5)(A) to a noncitizen who is inside the United States and who seeks to be able to request parole under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) upon return from a trip abroad. If we approve Form I-131 for a noncitizen inside the United States seeking an Advance Parole Document, we will issue an Advance Parole Document. A noncitizen who is inside the United States may use this document to present themselves at a Port of Entry to seek parole into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5) (in temporary but long-term humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit).

DHS may, in its discretion, grant advance permission to travel for Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) Long-Term Residents who are noncitizens who are outside the United States. If we approve Form I-131 for a CNMI long-term resident, we will issue an Advance Parole Document as evidence of advance permission to travel for CNMI long-term residents, which allows them to travel to any other part of the United States for temporary and legitimate purposes without automatically terminating their CNMI long-term resident status. CNMI long-term residents must obtain advance permission before departing the CNMI to travel to any other part of the United States (including Guam). Any travel in violation of these restrictions will result in the automatic termination of their status. Travel to the Island of Guam through a direct transit in Guam does not require advance permission.

A transportation company may accept Advance Parole Documents in place of a visa as an authorization to travel to the United States.

WARNING FOR ADVANCE PAROLE DOCUMENTS:

- An Advance Parole Document is not issued to serve in place of any required passport. An Advance Parole Document cannot be used solely to circumvent normal visa issuance procedures and is not a means to bypass delays in visa issuance.
- An Advance Parole Document issued to a noncitizen while they are inside the United States does not entitle that noncitizen to be paroled into the United States upon their return from a trip abroad. A separate discretionary decision on their request for parole into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) will be made when they arrive at a Port of Entry and apply for admission to the United States upon their return.
- DHS may revoke or terminate an Advance Parole Document at any time, including while the noncitizen is outside the United States, in which event the noncitizen may not use the document to return to the United States unless they have a valid visa or other document that allows them to travel to the United States and seek admission.
- If the noncitizen is applying for an Advance Parole Document based on their immigration status, being granted deferred action, or being covered under Deferred Enforcement Departure (DED), and they leave the United States without first obtaining an Advance Parole Document, they may no longer be eligible for that immigration status, deferred action, or being covered under DED and may not be permitted to return to the United States.
- If the noncitizen is applying for an Advance Parole Document based on being a parole under INA section 212(d)(5)(A), even if they obtain an Advance Parole Document before they leave the United States, their parole will automatically terminate when they leave the United States.

Consequences of Failure to Obtain Advance Parole Document for Certain Noncitizens Who Are Currently Inside the United States

If a noncitizen is inside the United States and has filed Form I-485, Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status, we generally will consider their Form I-485 abandoned if they leave the United States without first obtaining an Advance Parole Document.

Generally, we will not consider the Form I-485 as abandoned, even if the noncitizen does not obtain an Advance Parole Document before traveling abroad while their application is pending, if they are in one of the following classifications and remain eligible for and would be admissible in one of the following categories upon applying for admission at a Port of Entry:

- An H-1 nonimmigrant temporary worker, or H-4 spouse or child of an H-1;
- An L-1 nonimmigrant intracompany transferee, or L-2 spouse or child of an L-1;
- An E-3 nonimmigrant spouse, or H-4 nonimmigrant child of a E-3, citizen; or
- An E-2 nonimmigrant spouse, or E-2S E-2 nonimmigrant child of a lawful permanent resident.

Note: Upon returning to the United States, such noncitizens must present a valid H, L, or E nonimmigrant visa and must be otherwise admissible to avoid their adjustment of status application being considered abandoned. If the noncitizen does not have an approved advance parole travel document, they may be able to use the Form I-131 process to request a U.S. Department of State (DS) visa stamp in H, L, or E nonimmigrant visa at a U.S. Department of State (DS)visa issuing post or obtain an Advance Parole Document to avoid their adjustment of status application being deemed abandoned.

Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) Long-Term Residents Travel Outside the United States

The statute establishing the CNMI long-term resident status authorizes travel between the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) and foreign states. CNMI long-term residents are not required to obtain a grant of advance permission before traveling to a foreign country. Traveling to a foreign country without obtaining a grant of advance permission will not result in abandonment of Form I-485.

Upon returning to the United States, CNMI Long-Term Residents can only be admitted to the CNMI, except that a direct transit between the CNMI and a foreign place through Guam is allowed. Travel to any other part of the United States (including Guam) requires advance permission to travel.

Initial Parole Document for Noncitizens Who Are Outside the United States

DHS may, in its discretion, issue a Parole Document under the general parole authority of INA section 212(d)(5)(A) to a noncitizen outside the United States on a case-by-case basis for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit. If we approve Form I-131 for a noncitizen outside the United States seeking a Parole Document, we will issue a Parole Document. A noncitizen may use this document to appear at a Port of Entry to seek parole into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) (temporary for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit).

A transportation company may accept the Parole Document in place of a visa as authorization to travel to the United States.

Note: Form I-131 may not be used for initial Central American Minors (CAM) Program applications on behalf of individuals who have never been paroled into the United States under the CAM program. Information on initial CAM Program applications and program eligibility can be found on the CAM Program page.

Warning: A Parole Document issued to a noncitizen does not entitle them to be paroled into the United States. A separate discretionary decision on the request for parole into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) will be made when the noncitizen arrives at a Port of Entry.

Arrival/Departure Record for Parole in Place for Noncitizens who are Inside the United States

DHS, in its discretion, may grant parole in place on a case-by-case basis for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit to noncitizens who are present in the United States without inspection and admission. If we approve Form I-131 filed for a noncitizen seeking parole in place, the noncitizen will receive a Form I-94, Arrival/Departure Record, which is evidence of their parole in place.

Arrival/Departure Record for Re-parole (New Period of Parole for Parolees who are Inside the United States)

DHS may, in its discretion, grant a new period of parole, also known as re-parole, to noncitizens inside the United States who were previously paroled into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) for urgent humanitarian reasons or for significant public benefit. U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) may require noncitizens seeking re-parole to appear for an interview, or complete an immigration medical examination and submit the results to USCIS.

If we approve Form I-131 for a noncitizen seeking re-parole, we will issue a Form I-94, Arrival/Departure Record, which is evidence of their re-parole.

Before You Start Your Application

Eligibility

Who may file Form I-131?

A separate Form I-131 must be filed for each noncitizen seeking a travel document, Parole Document, or Arrival/Departure Record. Do not file Form I-131 if the noncitizen is seeking release via parole from immigration custody. The noncitizen should contact U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) about the request.

ICE generally has jurisdiction over Form I-131 requests when the noncitizen applicant or beneficiary is in exclusion, deportation, or removal proceedings, is subject to an administratively final exclusion, deportation, or removal order, or has previously been ordered excluded, deported, or removed from the United States.

Duplicate Form I-131 requests

Do not file duplicate Form I-131 requests of the same application type for the same beneficiary. We may reject, deny, administratively close, or terminate a duplicate Form I-131 if a previously submitted Form I-131 with the same applicant or petitioner and beneficiary is pending with that same application type.

Reentry Permit

Applying for a Reentry Permit

Lawful permanent residents and conditional permanent residents may apply for a Reentry Permit if they plan to be outside the United States for an extended period when they file the Reentry Permit application and complete the biometric services requirement. After filing the application for a Reentry Permit, USCIS will notify them the noncitizen in writing when to go to their local Application Support Center (ASC) for their biometric services appointment.

Note: A Reentry Permit may be sent to a U.S. Embassy, U.S. Consulate, or USCIS international field office abroad for the noncitizen to pick up, if they make such a request on Form I-131. Lawful permanent residents who are outside the United States and are able to pick up their Reentry Permit at all U.S. Embassies and U.S. Consulates, as available services may be limited at some locations.

If a noncitizen possesses a valid Reentry Permit, we will not consider them to have abandoned their status as a lawful permanent resident or conditional permanent resident based solely on the duration of their absences from the United States while the permit is valid. Nevertheless, a Reentry Permit does not exempt a lawful permanent resident from the requirements of the Immigration and Nationality Laws, only a returning resident visa obtained abroad from a U.S. Embassy or U.S. Consulate provides exemption from such compliance.

An absence from the United States for 1 year or more will generally break the continuity of a noncitizen's required continuous residence for the purpose of naturalization. If a noncitizen intends to remain outside the United States for 1 year or more, they may be eligible to file Form N-470, Application to Preserve Residence for Naturalization Purposes. Please see the Form N-470 page for more. Contact Center at 800-375-5283 (TTY 800-767-1833). The USCIS Contact Center provides information in English and Spanish.

Validity of Reentry Permit

- Generally, a Reentry Permit issued to a lawful permanent resident is valid for 2 years from the date of issuance. See 8 CFR section 223.3(c)(1). However, if the lawful permanent resident has been granted lawful permanent status for 2 years or since becoming a lawful permanent resident, we will limit the permit to 1 year. As an exception, we may issue a permit with a validity of 2 years to:
  - A lawful permanent resident whose travel is in the interest of the U.S. Government, other than an education, development, removal, or rescission order;
  - A lawful permanent resident employed by a public international organization of which the United States is a member by treaty or statute; or
  - A lawful permanent resident who is a professional athlete and regularly competes in the United States and worldwide.
- A Reentry Permit issued to a conditional permanent resident may be valid until the date the conditional resident status will expire, not to exceed 2 years.
- USCIS will not extend the validity of a Reentry Permit.

We will not issue a Reentry Permit to a noncitizen if:

- The noncitizen has already been issued such a document, and it is still valid, unless the prior document has been returned to USCIS or the noncitizen can demonstrate that it was lost; or
- A notice was published in the Federal Register that precludes the issuance of such a document to travel to the area the noncitizen intends to go.

Notice to lawful permanent residents or conditional permanent residents concerning possible abandonment of status: If the noncitizen does not obtain a Reentry Permit, longerly or frequent absences from the United States could be considered as evidence of their intent to abandon their status as a lawful permanent resident or conditional permanent resident status. If DHS determines upon their return to the United States, that the noncitizen has abandoned their lawful permanent resident or conditional permanent resident status, the noncitizen may challenge that determination if they are placed in removal proceedings.

Refugee Travel Document

If the noncitizen is in the United States and (1) in valid refugee or asylee status or (2) the noncitizen is a lawful permanent resident who obtained such status as a direct result of their refugee or asylee status in the United States, they may apply for a Refugee Travel Document. The noncitizen must apply BEFORE they leave the United States. If we require biometrics, the noncitizen must appear for any required biometric services appointment BEFORE they leave the United States. If they fail to appear for biometrics collection, we may deny their application.

When filing for a refugee travel document, applicants are advised to carefully review the filing instructions, and ensure that the application is sent to the correct filing location or office. Misfiled applications will result in delays in processing and may result in denial or rejection of the application for a refugee travel document.

After filing the application, USCIS will inform the noncitizen in writing when to go to their local USCIS Application Support Center (ASC) for their biometric services appointment. Unless they have other appropriate documentation, such as a valid reentry permit, they should not depart the United States until they receive the noncitizen must have a Refugee Travel Document to return to the United States after temporary travel abroad.

If the noncitizen is outside of the United States and (1) has valid refugee or asylee status or (2) the noncitizen is a lawful permanent resident as a direct result of their refugee or asylee status in the United States, they may file the noncitizen, in our discretion, to file Form I-131 and apply for a Refugee Travel Document. USCIS will make the decision whether to accept the application.

The noncitizen must file their application within 1 year of their last departure from the United States, unless they can demonstrate good cause of why they failed to apply for a Refugee Travel Document before they departed from the United States.

Travel Warning Regarding Voluntary Re-availment

Warning to asylees who travel to the country of claimed persecution: If a noncitizen applied for asylum on or after April 1, 1997, their asylum status may be terminated if it is determined that they have voluntarily availed themselves of the protection of the country of claimed persecution by the filing of their lawful permanent residence. See INA section 208(c)(2)(D), 8 U.S.C. 1158(c)(2)(D).

Validity of Reentry Permit

- A Refugee Travel Document is valid for 1 year.
- The validity date of a Refugee Travel Document cannot be extended.

A Refugee Travel Document may not be issued to a noncitizen if:

- The noncitizen has already been issued such a document and it is still valid, unless the prior document has been returned to USCIS or the noncitizen can demonstrate that it was lost or destroyed; or
- A notice was published in the Federal Register that precludes the issuance of such a document for travel to the area where the noncitizen intends to go.

Note: The noncitizen should apply for a Refugee Travel Document before they leave the United States. However, we can send a Refugee Travel Document to a U.S. Embassy, U.S. Consulate, or USCIS international field office for the noncitizen to pick up, if the noncitizen makes such a request when they file their application. Refugee Travel Documents may be sent to a U.S. Embassy or U.S. Consulate or USCIS International Field Office abroad, as available services may be limited at some locations. Departing from the United States before we make a decision on the application usually does not affect the decision. However, if we require biometrics and the noncitizen departs the United States before biometrics are collected, we may deny the application.

Notice to lawful permanent residents who obtain permanent residence as a refugee or asylee: If the noncitizen does not obtain a Refugee Travel Document or Reentry Permit and remains outside the United States, lengthy or frequent absences from the United States could be factors supporting a conclusion that the noncitizen has abandoned their status as a lawful permanent resident. With the exception of having to obtain a returning resident visa abroad, a Refugee Travel Document does not exempt a noncitizen from complying with any U.S. immigration laws. If the noncitizen possesses a valid, unexpired Reentry Permit, we will not consider them to have abandoned their status as a lawful permanent resident or conditional permanent resident based solely on the duration of their absences from the United States while the permit is valid.

Notice to lawful permanent residents applying for naturalization: An absence from the United States for 1 year or more will generally break the continuity of a noncitizen's required continuous residence for purpose of naturalization. If the noncitizen intends to remain outside the United States for 1 year or more, they may be eligible to file Form N-470, Application to Preserve Residence for Naturalization Purposes. For more information, call the USCIS Contact Center at 800-375-5283 (TTY 800-767-1833).

Abandonment of lawful permanent residence: If DHS determines, upon the noncitizen's return to the United States, that the noncitizen has abandoned their lawful permanent resident status, they may challenge that determination if the noncitizen is placed in removal proceedings, and seeks a determination whether the noncitizen may retain asylum status even if they cannot retain lawful permanent resident status.

Travel Authorization Related to Temporary Protected Status (TPS)

Travel Authorization for TPS Beneficiaries

If the noncitizen is a current TPS beneficiary, they can request TPS travel authorization under INA section 244(f)(3).

If a noncitizen has TPS and returns to the United States with DHS's prior travel authorization, DHS will determine upon inspection whether the noncitizen may be admitted into TPS. If the noncitizen travels and returns in accordance with the travel authorization, the noncitizen will be admitted in the same immigration status they had when they departed the United States, if they are not inadmissible for any reason determined to be inadmissible under certain criminal or security grounds that are also mandatory grounds of ineligibility for TPS. In such a case, the noncitizen may be placed in removal proceedings, and TPS may be withdrawn. See INA 244(c)(1) of the Miscellaneous and Technical Immigration and Naturalization Amendments of 1991 (MTINA), Pub. L. 102-232, 105 Stat. 1733, 1745, as amended (8 U.S.C. 1254a note).

General Rates Relating to Travel

Travel abroad by a noncitizen granted TPS who has an outstanding order of deportation, exclusion, or removal, or who is in deportation, exclusion, or removal proceedings or who is subject to the removal order in proceedings, if, and/or when, DHS decides to terminate TPS and may also be forced to remain in the United States, they may miss important notices from USCIS regarding their application, including requests for additional evidence. If the noncitizen does not respond timely to these notices, USCIS may deem their application abandoned and deny the application. Their TPS may also be withdrawn. It is very important that the noncitizen keep their contact information current with USCIS so they do not miss any such important notices, including creating a USCIS online account if they have not already done so. A noncitizen can use their USCIS online account to send secure messages, check the status of their cases, respond to Requests for Evidence (RFEs), verify their identity, and receive details on decisions for their case. Review the instructions for creating an online account.

Abandonment of TPS-Related Application for Travel Authorization

If the noncitizen leaves the United States while their request for travel authorization is pending, their Form I-131 will be deemed abandoned. Generally, we will not refund the filing fee. Nonimmigrants have a 30-day period that is valid for the entire time they are outside the United States. They also may not be permitted to reenter the United States, depending on the DHS inspector's discretion at the U.S. Port of Entry.

I-131, Application for Travel Documents, Parole Documents, and Arrival/Departure Records

Form I-131, Application for Travel Documents, Parole Documents, and Arrival/Departure Records, is used to apply for the following documents:

- Reentry Permits;
- Refugee Travel Documents;
- Temporary United States (TPS) Travel Authorization Documents;
- Advance Parole Documents;
- Initial Parole Documents for noncitizens outside the United States; and
- Arrival/Departure Records for parole in place and re-parole in the United States, and for noncitizens inside the United States.

Invalidation of Travel Documents

Any travel document obtained by making a materially false representation or concealment in this application will be invalid. Any travel document will also be invalid if you are ordered removed or deported from the United States.

In addition, a Refugee Travel Document will be invalid if the United Nations Convention of July 28, 1951, ceases to apply or does not apply to you as provided in Articles 1C, D, E, or F of the Convention.

Reentry Permits

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) may issue a Reentry Permit to a lawful permanent resident or a conditional permanent resident, which allows them to apply for admission to the United States during the permit's validity period. A lawful permanent resident may also request a Reentry Permit using Form I-131, Entry-only U.S. Consulate. If we approve Form I-131, filed by a lawful permanent resident or conditional permanent resident seeking a Reentry Permit, we will issue a Reentry Permit.

Refugee Travel Documents

DHS may issue a Refugee Travel Document to a noncitizen in valid refugee or asylee status, or to a lawful permanent resident who obtained such status as a direct result of refugee or asylee status in the United States, so that they may seek admission upon their return from a trip abroad. In addition, DHS may issue a Refugee Travel Document to a noncitizen who is a beneficiary of a petition for a Refugee Travel Document to reunite the United States after traveling abroad using this process as Advance Parole Document. If we approve a Form I-131 filed by a noncitizen in valid refugee or asylee status (or a lawful permanent resident who obtained such status as a direct result of refugee or asylee status) to obtain a Refugee Travel Document, we will issue a Refugee Travel Document which authorizes them to seek admission upon their return from a trip abroad.

A DHS officer at the Port of Entry will determine the noncitizen's admissibility when they present their Refugee Travel Document upon return from their trip abroad.

Travel Authorization Documents for TPS Beneficiaries Inside the United States

DHS may grant discretionary travel authorization to noncitizens who have been granted TPS, if an immigration officer finds that their travel abroad is in the interest of the United States. Travel Authorization for Travel Authorization to the United States, to receive evidence of DHS's prior consent to their travel outside the United States under the Immigration and Naturalization Act (INA) section 244(f)(3). DHS will determine at inspection whether you may be admitted into TPS if you travel and return in accordance with your TPS travel authorization and your TPS remains valid, you will be admitted into TPS. If you are found inadmissible for reasons other than those grounds specified that are mandatory ineligibility grounds for TPS.

Advance Parole Document for Noncitizens Who Are Currently Inside the United States and Advance Permission to Travel for CNMI Long-Term Residents

DHS may, as a matter of discretion, issue an Advance Parole Document under the general parole authority of INA section 212(d)(5)(A) to a noncitizen who is inside the United States and who seeks to be able to request parole under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) upon return from a trip abroad. If we approve Form I-131 for a noncitizen inside the United States seeking an Advance Parole Document, we will issue a Form I-94, Arrival/Departure Record, which authorizes the noncitizen to request to present themselves at a Port of Entry to seek parole into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5) 24 temporarily for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit.

DHS may, in its discretion, grant advance permission to travel to the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) long-term residents, who are otherwise not permitted to travel to the rest of the United States, under 8 CFR section 212.7 for a CNMI long-term residents. If we approve Form I-131 for a CNMI long-term residents, which allows the noncitizen to request to present themselves at a Port of Entry to request parole into the United States, we will issue a Form I-94, Arrival/Departure Record, which authorizes the noncitizen to request to present themselves at a Port of Entry to seek parole into the United States. Advance parole allows CNMI long-term residents to request parole into the United States, including Guam, they travel in violation of these restrictions will result in the termination of status. Travel to or from a foreign place through a direct transit in Guam does not require advance permission.

A transportation company may accept Advance Parole Documents in place of a visa as an authorization to travel to the United States.

WARNINGS FOR ADVANCE PAROLE DOCUMENTS:

- An Advance Parole Document is not issued to serve in place of any required passport. An Advance Parole Document is issued to allow the noncitizen to complete normal inspection procedures and is not a means to bypass delays in visa issuance.
- An Advance Parole Document issued to a noncitizen while they are inside the United States does not entitle that noncitizen to be paroled into the United States upon their return from a trip abroad. A separate discretionary decision or their request for parole into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) will be made when they arrive at a Port of Entry and apply for admission to the United States upon their return.
- A noncitizen may request an Advance Parole Document at any time, including while the noncitizen is outside the United States, in which event the noncitizen may be unable to return to the United States unless they have a valid visa or other document that allows them to travel to the United States without a visa.
- If the noncitizen is applying for an Advance Parole Document based on their immigration status, being granted deferred action, or being covered under Deferred Enforced Departure (DED), and they leave the United States without first obtaining an Advance Parole Document, they may no longer be eligible for deferred action, deferred action, or being covered under DED and may not be permitted to return to the United States.
- If the noncitizen is applying for an Advance Parole Document based on being a parole under INA section 212(d)(5), even if they obtain an Advance Parole Document before they leave the United States, their parole will automatically terminate when they leave the United States.

Consequences of Failure to Obtain Advance Parole Documents for Certain Noncitizens Who Are Currently Inside the United States

If a noncitizen is inside the United States and has filed Form I-485, Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status, we generally will consider their Form I-485 abandoned if they leave the United States without first obtaining an Advance Parole Document.

Generally, we will consider the Form I-485 as abandoned, even if the noncitizen does not obtain an Advance Parole Document before traveling abroad while their application is pending, if they are in one of the following classifications and they intend to return to the United States and are in the following categories upon applying for admission at a Port of Entry:

- An K-1 nonimmigrant temporary worker, or K-4 spouse or child of an K-1;
- An L-1 nonimmigrant intracompany transferee, or L-2 spouse or child of an L-1;
- A V-1 nonimmigrant spouse, or V-3 nonimmigrant child of a lawful permanent resident;
- A V-2 nonimmigrant spouse, or V-3 nonimmigrant child of a lawful permanent resident.

Note: Upon returning to the United States, such noncitizens must present a valid K, L, V, or V nonimmigrant visa and must be otherwise admissible to avoid their adjustment of status application being considered abandoned. If the noncitizen does not have an approved advance parole travel document, they will be treated as an applicant for admission who is seeking entry without a valid visa under K, L, V, or V nonimmigrant visa at a U.S. Department of State (DOS) visa issuing post to obtain an Advance Parole Document to avoid their adjustment of status application being deemed abandoned.

Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) Long-Term Residents Travel Outside the United States

The statute establishing the CNMI long-term resident status authorizes travel between the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) and foreign places. CNMI long-term residents are not required to obtain a grant of advance permission before traveling to a foreign country. Traveling to a foreign country without obtaining a grant of advance permission will not be considered an abandonment of Form I-485.

Upon returning to the United States, CNMI Long-Term Residents can only be admitted to the CNMI, except that a direct transit through a foreign place will not be considered a violation of their status. Travel to any other part of the United States (including Guam) requires advance permission to travel.

Initial Parole Document for Noncitizens Who Are Outside the United States

DHS may, in its discretion, issue a Parole Document under the general parole authority of INA section 212(d)(5)(A), to a noncitizen outside the United States on a case-by-case basis for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit. If we approve Form I-131 for a noncitizen outside the United States seeking a Parole Document, we will issue a Parole Document, which authorizes the noncitizen to request to present themselves at a Port of Entry to request parole into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) temporarily for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit.

A transportation company may accept the Parole Document in place of a visa as authorization to travel to the United States.

Note: Form I-131 may not be used for Initial Central American Minors (CAM) Program applications on behalf of individuals who have never been paroled into the United States under the CAM Program. Please refer to the Initial CAM Program applications and program eligibility rules on the CAM Program page.

Warning: A Parole Document issued to a noncitizen does not entitle them to be paroled into the United States. A separate discretionary decision on the request for parole into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) will be made when the noncitizen arrives at a Port of Entry.

Arrival/Departure Record for Parole in Place for Noncitizens who are Inside the United States

DHS, in its discretion, may grant a parole on a case by case basis for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit to noncitizens who are present in the United States without inspection and admission. If we approve Form I-131 filed for a noncitizen seeking parole in place, the noncitizen will receive a Form I-94, Arrival/Departure Record, which is evidence of their parole in place.

Noncitizens inside the United States previously granted parole in place may request a new period of parole in place, if they meet the criteria. Please refer to the Arrival/Departure Record for the parole section below for additional information.

Arrival/Departure Record for the parole (New Period of Parole for Parolees who are inside the United States)

DHS may, in its discretion, grant a new period of parole, also known as re-parole, to noncitizens inside the United States who were previously paroled into the United States under INA section 212(d)(5)(A) for urgent humanitarian reasons or for significant public benefit. U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) may require noncitizens seeking re-parole to submit biometrics, appear for an interview, or complete an immigration medical examination and submit the results to USCIS.

If we approve Form I-131 for a noncitizen seeking re-parole, we will issue a Form I-94, Arrival/Departure Record, which is evidence of their re-parole.
