

study results. Frozen serum/plasma/urine samples and buffy coats for WBC derived RNA are available in two carefully characterized cohorts comprising over 7000 individuals. The presence of young, middle-aged, and elderly subjects will allow a more complete exploration of biomarkers for relevant traits across a wide age range (20–90 years). The FHS main contracts (N01–HC–38038; N01–HC–25195) have provided for the core examinations of the participants that include physical examination, ECG, multidetector CT scans for coronary calcification and visceral adiposity, and blood specimen collection. In addition, buffy coats and purified white blood cell RNA also are available for WBC-derived RNA expression profiling to complement circulating biomarker and genotypic characterization.
