A. Screening Interview with Demographic Questionnaire

Screening Questions for FTC Pilot

Hello, my name is _____. I am calling on behalf of the Georgetown University Credit Research Center and the Center for Business and Industrial Studies at the University of Missouri-St. Louis. We are conducting a study for the United States Federal Trade Commission on the accuracy of credit bureau information. You should have received a recent letter from the FTC indicating that your household was selected at random for this study and that we would be calling you. Do you have the package of materials from the FTC?

First we must ask if you or a person in your immediate family works for a credit reporting agency such as Equifax, Experion or Trans Union.

If yes, express thanks for taking the call but indicate that we are not permitted to include such households in the survey.

The study applies to adults (age 21 or over) who have had some type of credit card, consumer loan or mortgage loan. Are there individuals in your household who are over 21 and with any type of credit card, car loan, home mortgage or other type of consumer loan in the past ten years? _____.

If no one in the household meets these criteria, then express thanks, indicate that the household does not meet the criteria for the study and exit.

We will be interviewing only one consumer in each household and are choosing the eligible person with the most recent birthday if that person is available. May we speak with that person?

If same person, go to Informed Consent:

If person with most recent birthday is a different person and not available, ask for person with next most recent birthday if available contact information and call back.

For newly introduced eligible householder with most recent birthday:

Hello, my name is _____. I am calling on behalf of the Georgetown University Credit Research Center and the Center for Business and Industrial Studies at the University of Missouri-St. Louis. As we indicated to _____, we are conducting a study for the United States Federal Trade Commission on the accuracy of credit bureau information. Do you have the package of materials from the FTC? _____

Qualification and Informed consent:

Perhaps I should give you a bit of background for the study.

Credit bureau information is used widely in granting credit, for setting loan rates and insurance premiums, and also by employers when making hiring decisions. This study will help the United States Federal Trade Commission (FTC) assess the extent to which consumers may be affected by erroneous credit-bureau data. It is necessary to survey individual consumers to obtain information needed for this important assessment.

If you participate in the study, you will receive a free credit report and credit score from each of the three major credit bureaus. We will provide you with expert assistance to help you review and understand your credit report and credit score. You will be asked to identify and report any significant errors to the credit bureaus (with our help, if necessary). We will follow up to see if the requested changes were made to the credit-bureau files. All information collected and its use are protected and regulated by law.

<In response to inquiries, it may be mentioned that to protect consumers, digits are removed from participants' social security numbers and account numbers in all the credit reports to prevent anyone from misuse of the information. Credit card information does not include account statement details such as specific transactions or merchants with whom the customer did business. Nor does it contain information about household income or financial assets such as bank savings accounts, securities, etc.)

If subject is to be offered an honorarium add: Upon completion of this process, you will receive a $50 check for your participation.

I must to ask you a few more questions to confirm that you qualify for participation in the study.

Have you examined your own credit report from one or more credit bureau within the past year?

If no, go to invitation to participate.

Did you obtain your credit scores? ____

Did you find significant errors in the report? ____

If no, go to demographic information.

Did you attempt to get the errors corrected? ____

If no, go to invitation to participate.

Were the errors resolved to your satisfaction? ____

If yes, go to demographic information.

Invitation to Participate:

Your participation in this study will help our government test the accuracy of the credit reporting system.

If the person indicates that he or she wishes not to participate, go to demographic data to allow us to estimate refusal rates by demographic characteristic.

May we confirm that your current address is:

[number] , [street] , [city] , [state] , [zip] .

And that your name is _____.

Credit Report Acquisition

We are required to obtain written consent before calling back to arrange the production and mailing of your credit reports and credit scores. Would you kindly sign the consent form provided in the FTC letter and mail it in the self-addressed envelope? When we receive your consent form, we shall call again to arrange the acquisition of your credit reports and credit scores.

What is a good time for us to call back in the next couple of weeks?

Just to review the process, let me confirm that we will call back to telephone number _____ at approximately (time) _____ on (date) _____ to arrange the acquisition of your credit reports.

We have arrangements with the Fair Isaac Corporation to provide promotional codes that you may use to establish an account (without charge) through which credit reports and corresponding credit scores from the three major credit bureaus may be viewed and printed. Participants also authorize the University to print a copy of the credit reports for review. If you have internet access, you may establish the account using a password that we provide. That way, you will not have to give your SSN to the university over the phone. If you do not have internet access, we can establish the account for you during the telephone visit. Either way, we are willing to print the long credit reports (which can amount to 150 pages (50 pages per bureau) for people with a long credit history) and mail you a copy.

We shall furnish you with a guide for organizing the information in preparation for an in-depth telephone interview in which we help you study them in detail and identify any discrepancies. That interview could take from 10 minutes to an hour, depending on complexity of the reports and whether there seem to be errors.

To ensure that we work with a representative sample of consumers, we need a few items of personal information.

B. Consumer Consent Form

Consumer Consent for Participation in Pilot Study of Credit Report Accuracy

I am signing this consent form in connection with a letter I have received from the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC) regarding a study of the accuracy of credit reports. A copy of this letter is attached as part of this consent form.

I am giving permission to the FTC's designated researchers from the University of Missouri-St. Louis, Georgetown University, and the Fair Isaac Corporation (the research team) to obtain copies of three respective credit reports and credit scores for me – one from each of the nationwide credit reporting agencies: Equifax, Experian, and TransUnion.

The research team may review my credit report information with me to see if I believe there are inaccuracies, and I will receive advice on the difference between a small inaccuracy (such as a misspelling of my name or address or a date when an account was closed) and a potentially significant error (such as a missed payment or collection activity) that could affect my credit rating. The research team will explain how I may challenge information that I believe to be significantly in error, and the research team will follow the results of disputes with the credit reporting agencies. There is no monetary cost to me for obtaining my three credit reports, the related credit scores, or any assistance provided by the research team.

I agree to provide the research team with information about the results of any disputes that I register with a credit bureau or lender as a result of the review of my credit reports. I further understand that any information collected about me, whether credit report information or any information that I supplied as a participant in this study, is collected only for the purpose of the study described in the attached FTC letter. I understand that the use of this information is protected and regulated by law, and I have read the Privacy Act Statement in the attached FTC letter.

D. Checklist for Consumer to Prepare for Review of Credit Reports

Checklist for Reviewing Your Credit Files

To assist you in reviewing your credit bureau files, we suggest you proceed as follows:

1. As you examine the credit bureau reports, please note that each credit agency has a slightly different format for reporting the same basic information. Along with the reports, you should have received some instructions provided by the credit bureaus that are designed to help you understand the various items shown in your report.

2. We suggest you start with just one report and conduct a complete review of it before looking at the other reports. It would be most helpful when we call to interview you if you focus on these areas:

- * Is your name, address, and other identifying information in the front of the report correct?

- * If you currently have a mortgage on a home, is the name of the lender, outstanding balance, date opened, number of delinquencies, etc. correct?

- * If you have had any car loans in the last 7 years, try to find those in the report paying special attention to the date of loan, lender name, loan balance and payment history. Are they correctly reported?

- * For every credit card you currently have, locate it in the report and check the date issued, lender name, current balance and payment delinquencies (if any). Are all of these items correct?

- * If you currently have other types monthly installment loans for purchasing goods or services, please locate those in the report. Pay special attention to the date of loan, lender name, current balance and payment delinquencies (if any). Are all of these items correct?

- * For any closed loans (mortgages, car loans, credit cards, etc.), carefully exam those for which the report suggests there may have been some delinquent payments. Does this information appear correct?

- * Does the report show any loans that went to collection? Is the information reported correct? (Collection means you were in default on the payments and the lender hired a collection agency to try to collect the money from you.)

3. After you have reviewed one report in detail, do the same thing for the other credit bureau reports. Do you see any significant differences between the reports? What are they?

G. Information Given to Consumers re Filing Disputes

Correcting Inaccuracies in Credit-Bureau Files

At the bottom of the three credit-bureau reports is information about the process to follow if you identify inaccuracies. Specifically, you will find the following addresses and phone numbers through which you should report inaccuracies to the respective credit bureaus. In addition, you should bring an error to the attention of the creditor that seems to have furnished the inaccurate information to the credit bureau. To register disputes regarding information obtained through myFICO, Fair Isaac recommends that you follow the instructions located at the bottom of the individual reports. FTC Information

Additional information on registering disputes regarding information in credit-bureau files can be found at the FTC website:

Included in the FTC information are answers to the following questions:

Q: What if I find inaccuracies or incomplete information in my credit report?

A: Under the FCRA, both the consumer reporting company and the information provider (that is, the person, company, or organization that provides information about you to a consumer reporting company) are responsible for correcting inaccurate or incomplete information in your report. To take full advantage of your rights under this law, contact the consumer reporting company and the information provider.

1. Tell the consumer reporting company, in writing, what information you think is inaccurate. Consumer reporting companies must investigate the items in question - usually within 30 days - unless they consider your dispute frivolous. They also must forward all the relevant data you provide about the inaccuracy to the organization that provided the information. After the information provider receives notice of a dispute from the consumer reporting company, it must investigate, review the relevant information, and report the results back to the consumer reporting company. If the information provider finds the disputed information is inaccurate, it must notify all three nationwide consumer reporting companies so they can correct the information in your file.

When the investigation is complete, the consumer reporting company must give you the written results and a free copy of your report if the dispute results in a change. (This free report does not count as your annual free report under the FACT Act.) If an item is changed or deleted, the consumer reporting company cannot put the disputed information back in your file unless the information provider verifies that it is accurate and complete. The consumer reporting company also must send you written notice that includes the name, address, and phone number of the information provider.

2. Tell the creditor or other information provider in writing that you dispute an item. Many providers specify an address for disputes. If the provider reports the item to a consumer reporting company, it must include a notice of your dispute. And if you are correct - that is, if the information is found to be inaccurate - the information provider may not report it again.

Q: What can I do if the consumer reporting company or information provider won't correct the information I dispute?

A: If an investigation doesn't resolve your dispute with the consumer reporting company, you can ask that a statement of the dispute be included in your file and in future reports. You also can ask the consumer reporting company to provide your statement to anyone who received a copy of your report in the recent past. You can expect to pay a fee for this service. If you tell the information provider that you dispute an item, a notice of your dispute must be included any time the information provider reports the item to a consumer reporting company.
