Patent Application Forecasting Program

Part 1: Patent Application Activity

To serve you in a timely fashion and at high levels of quality, the USPTO relies on reliable forecasts of future patent filings to allocate its resources efficiently and effectively. Your answers to the following questions are very important!

Domestic Filings

1. Please report the number of provisional patent application filings submitted or expected to be submitted in the years indicated below.

	Application Filings

National provisional applications¹

¹A provisional application for a patent is a type of application filed in the USPTO. It allows filing without a formal patent claim, oath or declaration, or any information disclosure (prior art) statement. It provides the means to establish an early effective filing date in a non-provisional patent application and automatically becomes abandoned after one year. It also allows the term “Patent Pending” to be applied.

2. Please report the number of national non-provisional utility patent application filings submitted or expected to be submitted in the years indicated below.

	Application Filings

National non-provisional applications²

²These are the most common applications filed at the USPTO. National non-provisional utility patent applications are filed for inventions or discoveries of any new, useful, and non-obvious process, machine, article of manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof. A national filing is one submitted under the laws of a country and/or the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property. Please include all non-provisional utility application filings subject to a filing fee including a Request for Continued Examination (RCE) filing to reopen prosecution and continue examination of an application in which prosecution is closed (e.g., the application is under final rejection or a notice of allowance).

3. Please report the number of PCT international application filings submitted or expected to be submitted to the USPTO Receiving Office for the indicated years.

Part 2: Patent Valuation

6. To help gauge the value created by patents granted, the USPTO is interested in estimating the fair market value of a U.S. patent. Please select the range that best represents the fair market value of your patent or the average fair market value of all your patents. For the purpose of this survey, fair market value is the price at which the patent would change hands at the present time between a willing buyer and a willing seller, with both having reasonable knowledge of relevant facts.
