Public reporting burden for this collection of information is estimated to average 60 minutes per response, including the time for reviewing instructions, searching existing data sources, gathering and maintaining the data needed, and completing and reviewing the collection of information. An agency may not conduct or sponsor, and a person is not required to respond to, a collection of information unless it displays a currently valid OMB control number. Send comments regarding this burden estimate or any other aspect of this collection of information, including suggestions for reducing this burden, to CDC/ATSDR Reports Clearance Officer; 1600 Clifton Road, MS D-24, Atlanta, GA 30333, ATTN: PRA (0920-0222).

Introduction

Thank you for agreeing to participate in this interview today. You have read the Informed Consent form and you agree to take part in this research study. Is that correct? [Interviewer waits for verbal acknowledgment]. You have given your permission for me to tape record your interview today and, if needed, to play it to other people working on this study. Is that correct? [Interviewer waits for verbal acknowledgment].

I have in front of me questions from a larger survey about gender and behaviors that can put people at risk for contracting HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. Some of the questions are very personal—for example, some questions are about sexual activities, number of sexual partners, and the use of silicone and hormones. There are also some questions on networking – strategies for finding eligible participants. The final survey, including some of the questions I would like to ask you, will be used with people who were born male but identify, live, act, or consider themselves to be a woman. Before interviewers begin to use the survey with more people, we need to test the questions. This interview with you will help us find out if the questions are difficult to answer and whether or not they make sense to people.

First, I want to read the questions to you and have you answer them. It is important that I ask all of these questions, but you don't have to answer specific questions that you do not want to answer. I want to remind you that this interview is strictly confidential. Confidential means that your name will never be linked to the answers you give. When we write a report, we will not put your name in it.

After we finish with the questions in the survey, I will ask you some follow-up questions about how you decided your answers and how you interpreted certain words. I will also ask you if there were any questions that were not easy to understand and how you think we could change the questions so more people will understand them.

Do you have any questions you want to ask me before we begin?

Ending the interview

In looking at my watch, we are pretty much out of time. Do you have any last thoughts or questions? [If not, proceed]. [Continue recording] I want to thank you for coming today and sharing your thoughts, experiences, and opinions. The information you have provided will be very useful in helping to improve the questionnaire. [Hand the respondent the packet containing the thank-you letter, copy of consent form, and the $50]. In this packet you'll see we have provided you with a copy of the consent form you read prior to the start of our interview. This is for your records [point to consent form]. We have also included a thank-you letter signed by the Director of the National Center for Health Statistics along with the $50 cash incentive we promised [point to thank you letter and envelope containing $50]. Can you please say that you have received everything for the tape recorder? [Wait for acknowledgement]. Again, thank you for all of your assistance today. [Turn off audio tape recorder at this time]. [Escort respondent out of the RTI interviewing room].

INTERVIEWER NOTE: Once the interview has concluded and the respondent has left the interviewing room, the audiotape, consent form and the modified participant data collection sheet will be turned over to an NCHS staff person.
