Investment in Subsidiaries and Equities

Introduction

Banks develop, and offer through various subsidiaries and other business entities, a wide range of products and services designed to increase profitability, improve service to customers, and respond to technological innovations and competition. These subsidiaries and other business entities include operating subsidiaries, financial subsidiaries, bank service companies, and noncontrolling interests in business entities performing bank permissible activities (subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments). This booklet describes various types of subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments that banks can establish and provides detailed guidance on permissible and incidental activities.

The Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) has created procedures and conditions for the establishment and operations of subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments. This booklet outlines these procedures and conditions.

To establish a subsidiary or make a noncontrolling investment, the OCC generally requires banks to submit an application and obtain prior approval. In some cases, banks can submit to the OCC an after-the-fact notice, when establishing or commencing new activities in subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments. This booklet contains policies and procedures to guide banks in filing these applications and notices and outlines exceptions to these requirements. It also provides information on the regulatory and statutory factors the OCC considers in making a decision; the application process (including the pre-filing process, filing the application, and processing time frames); application issues; specific requirements for insurance, electronic, and fiduciary activities; and the post approval process.

This booklet also provides a step-by-step procedures section for the applicant and the OCC to follow and a glossary of terms used. Throughout this booklet there are hyperlinks to filing samples and other booklets in the Comptroller's Licensing Manual series, as well as other information applicants may use to file to establish various subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments.

Key Policies

Applications and Notices

In most cases, a national bank is required to submit an application or notice and obtain OCC approval or "no objection" prior to establishing, acquiring, or investing in an operating or financial subsidiary, or performing a new activity in an existing operating or financial subsidiary. Banks must generally file a notice with the OCC to make an investment in a bank service company or a noncontrolling equity investment in an entity that performs bank permissible activities.

A national bank that is "well capitalized" and "well managed" (see Glossary) may file an after-the-fact notice if it is planning to engage in certain qualifying activities. If the activity does not qualify, or if the bank is not eligible to file an after-the-fact notice, the bank must file an application. The qualifying criteria to establish a subsidiary and the pre-approved activities that subsidiaries may perform are discussed in detail in this booklet. Applicants should contact the appropriate director for district licensing to determine the eligibility of the bank and the activity for the after-the-fact notice, or to determine if the OCC will require an application.

The OCC reviews a bank's filing to determine whether the proposed activities and location are legally permissible, the activities comply with OCC policy, and the activities will not endanger the safety and soundness of the bank.

The OCC will conduct a detailed analysis of the new activity, taking into consideration the inherent risk characteristics of the activity, the condition of the institution seeking to conduct the activity, and the proposed volume of the new activity. The OCC will determine whether the proposed activity can be regulated and supervised appropriately to address safety and soundness risks and to otherwise serve the public interest. Protection of consumers and prevention of financial crimes are examples of how the public interest is served.

The OCC will consider the applicant's efforts to identify, plan for, and manage systems risks for those activities heavily reliant upon technology. These risks could include software incompatibility, systems integration problems, or hardware system failures. These systems risks are present, for example, when a bank's operating subsidiary performs data processing activities or provides electronic banking services, such as stored value, remote banking, or electronic authentication activities.

Any application that does not adequately address these risks could require additional processing time, be subject to special enforceable conditions, or result in an OCC decision to deny.

Special Conditions

The OCC may conditionally approve an application after reviewing the filing and considering the relevant factors, and impose appropriate special conditions for the activities of subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments. The OCC uses special conditions to protect the safety and soundness of the bank, prevent conflicts of interest, provide customer protection, or provide for other supervisory or policy considerations.

Undercapitalized Banks

The OCC may approve an application from an undercapitalized bank to establish or invest in subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments, or approve the entity to engage in a new activity, if the OCC determines that:

- The bank has submitted an acceptable capital restoration plan.
- The bank is implementing the plan.
- The proposed filing is consistent with and will further the plan's achievement.

Publication

Generally, the OCC does not require public notice for filings covered by this booklet, unless the application presents significant and novel policy, supervisory, or legal issues and a public notice is beneficial. (See the “Public Notice and Comments” booklet, “Additional Public Notice by Applicant,” for more information.)

Consolidated Financial Statements

Consolidated financial statements combine the assets, liabilities, revenues, and expenses of the subsidiary with those of the reporting bank. Ownership interests should be accounted for in accordance with generally accepted accounting procedures (GAAP). Refer to Accounting, Related Organizations Handbook, for a specific discussion and additional guidance.

The bank will combine pertinent financial data of the parent bank and its subsidiaries to conform to applicable statutory limitations, unless otherwise provided by statute or regulation. For example, the combined exposure of the parent bank and all of its operating subsidiaries to a single borrower may not exceed the bank’s lending limit.

Multiple Transactions

The OCC does not require a separate application and filing fee for subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments when the entity is:

- Retained in a merging or converting institution.
- Established together with an application for a new national bank charter. (See the “Charters” booklet for additional information.)

In these situations, the OCC will consider the subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments with the primary filing and, if appropriate, may request a legal opinion on the subsidiary's activities or the activities of the entity in which the bank has a noncontrolling investment. The review period will run concurrently with the OCC's processing and decision on the merger, conversion, or charter application. The OCC will include its decision on the filing and any appropriate conditions in the decision letter for the merger, conversion, or charter.

Mergers and Acquisitions

Generally, the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976 (HSR) requires that prior notice of certain proposed mergers and acquisitions, along with a filing fee, be provided to the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and Department of Justice (DOJ). The HSR established pre-merger notification and waiting-period requirements for certain merger and acquisition transactions exceeding certain threshold tests.

The threshold tests relate to the size of the parties to the transaction and to the size of the ownership interest being acquired. Exceptions exist for acquisitions subject to federal agency antitrust review and approval, such as applications under the Bank Merger Act (BMA) and sections 3 and 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act (BHCA). Frequently, however, the acquisition of operating and financial subsidiaries will be done outside of the scope of the BMA or BHCA. In such cases, applicants should carefully consider the thresholds and waiting periods established under the HSR.

Based on interpretations of the FTC and DOJ, transactions subject to the HSR include acquisitions of financial subsidiaries, whether on a stand-alone basis or as part of a BMA application. Transactions involving operating subsidiary acquisitions as part of a BMA application are exempt from the HSR provided the assets or subsidiaries acquired are held by the target of the BMA application. An acquisition of an operating subsidiary triggering the threshold tests will be subject to the HSR unless it is exempt under any of the relevant statutes specified in the HSR. The FTC will not grant an exception for any portion of a bank transaction that may fall outside of the BMA. The FTC refers to these types of acquisitions as “mixed transactions” and requires HSR filing for any part of the transaction not acquired pursuant to a BMA filing.

The acquirer and the target must determine the applicability of HSR to the proposed transaction, and, if required, file a copy of the filing with the FTC and DOJ at least 30 days before planned consummation. The HSR authorizes the assessment of civil money penalties for failure to comply with its provisions.

Operating Subsidiaries

An operating subsidiary is a corporation, limited liability company (LLC), or similar entity a bank owns or controls in which it may conduct activities that the bank could engage in directly, either as part of, or incidental to, the business of banking, as determined by the OCC.

To determine if an activity is part of the business of banking, the OCC considers if it:

- Is the functional equivalent to, or a logical out-growth of, a recognized banking activity.
- Strengthens the bank by benefiting its customers or its business.
- Involves risks similar in nature to those already assumed by banks.
- Is authorized for state-chartered banks.

To determine if an activity is incidental to the business of banking, the OCC considers whether it is convenient or useful to the bank in conducting its banking business.

Ownership

A bank may invest in an operating subsidiary if the bank owns and maintains more than 50 percent of the operating subsidiary's voting stock or similar interest, or otherwise controls the entity.

A bank may own 50 percent or less of the voting interest of an operating subsidiary if it controls the subsidiary and no other party controls more than 50 percent (or a percentage greater than the bank's interest) of the voting interest in the subsidiary. A bank must file an application for OCC approval when proposing to own this type of interest in an operating subsidiary.

The OCC will evaluate a bank's control mechanisms in the review process to ensure the bank has effective control over the operating subsidiary. The OCC will review carefully the risks inherent in any proposal to ensure the bank is not exposed to undue risks. The OCC also will consider if generally accepted accounting principles or consolidated report of condition and income (Call Report) instructions require consolidated financial statements for the bank and its operating subsidiary. If the bank is required to consolidate its ownership of the subsidiary solely because of the Financial Accounting Standards Board's Interpretation No. 46, Consolidation of Variable Interest Entities, the bank should contact the appropriate district accountant or director for district licensing to determine the filing and approval requirements prior to any filing.

Partnership or Joint Venture

A bank's operating subsidiary may be a general or limited partner in a partnership or a member of a joint venture. If a bank proposes to enter such an arrangement through an operating subsidiary, with the subsidiary being either a limited or a general partner or member, the bank must file with the OCC and receive approval for the subsidiary's activity. The operating subsidiary must be "adequately capitalized" (refer to Glossary for definition) and operated appropriately to minimize the risk of liability passing through the subsidiary to the bank.

Whenever an operating subsidiary joins a partnership or joint venture, it must either control the conduct of the business, possess a veto power, or be able to withdraw from the transaction to ensure the partnership or joint venture will perform only activities that are part of, or incidental to, the business of banking, or are otherwise authorized for a national bank.

Noncontrolling Interest

A bank proposing to own less than 50 percent of the voting (or similar) interest of a business entity and not exercise control of it may be eligible to do so as an "other equity investment" (12 CFR 5.36). In addition, the OCC may determine that ownership of a noncontrolling interest in an entity (for example, an LLC) by an operating subsidiary is permissible. Additional information and guidance may be found in the "Other Equity Investments" section of this booklet.

Decision Criteria

The OCC generally will grant approval for the investment in an operating subsidiary, provided that:

- The subsidiary's proposed activity is legally permissible.
- The activity of the bank and its subsidiary is consistent with safe and sound banking practices.
- The bank's performance of the activity through the subsidiary is not in contravention of OCC policy.

Filing Process

The bank's condition and the subsidiary's activity will determine the way a bank files with the director for district licensing. Depending on these factors, the OCC will permit the bank to submit an after-the-fact notice (notice process), will require a standard application, or, in limited circumstances, will not require that an application be filed (see below for specifics or 12 CFR 5.34).

Only “well capitalized” and “well managed” (see Glossary) banks may file under the notice process, and the subsidiary's activities must be among those listed in the regulation (12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(v)). In addition to being listed in the regulation, the activity must be conducted in a manner that does not raise OCC policy issues or supervisory concerns. Making loans and other extensions of credit is an example of a well-established activity previously approved by the OCC for operating subsidiaries. This activity is listed in the regulation and is eligible for the notice process. However, when the activity is conducted on terms other than those considered standard by policy or guidelines, as in certain types of subprime lending, there is a potential to create a policy issue or supervisory concern, and the activity thereby becomes ineligible for the notice process.

For banks that do not qualify, or when activities proposed are not among those eligible for the notice process, the bank must follow the standard filing process.

The OCC does not require an application or notice for a bank to acquire or establish an operating subsidiary, provided that the bank is “adequately” or “well capitalized” (see Glossary) and all of the following requirements are met:

- Activities of the new operating subsidiary are limited to those activities previously reported by the bank in connection with the prior establishment or acquisition of an operating subsidiary.
- Establishment or acquisition of the prior operating subsidiary was deemed permissible by the OCC.
- Activities in which the new subsidiary will engage continue to be legally permissible.
- Activities of the new operating subsidiary will be conducted in accordance with any conditions imposed by the OCC in approving the conduct of these activities for any prior operating subsidiary of the bank and according to the OCC's published guidelines for operating subsidiaries (see Appendix A).

After-the-Fact Notice

A bank meeting certain criteria may file an after-the-fact notice for specific activities listed in the “activities eligible for notice” section of 12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(v). The after-the-fact notice category contains commonly accepted banking-related activities the OCC has approved previously for operating subsidiaries. Under this process, a bank files a written notice with the OCC within 10 days after establishing or acquiring the operating subsidiary, or commencing a new activity in an existing operating subsidiary, and need not seek prior OCC approval. The OCC's Operating Subsidiary Guidelines (see Appendix A) describe the requirements or limitations for activities eligible for the notice process.

To qualify for the notice process, the bank owning the subsidiary must be “well capitalized” and “well managed” (see Glossary). Any bank filing an after-the-fact notice under this section is deemed to have represented that the subsidiary will conduct the activity in a manner consistent with OCC's guidance and under the same terms and conditions as applicable if the activity were conducted directly by the bank.

The activities qualifying for the notice process are:

- Holding and managing assets acquired by the parent bank, including investment assets and property acquired by the bank through foreclosure or otherwise in good faith to compromise a doubtful claim, or in the ordinary course of collecting a debt previously contracted.
- Providing services to or for the bank or its affiliates, including accounting, auditing, appraising, advertising and public relations, and financial advice and consulting.
- Making loans or other extensions of credit, and selling money orders, savings bonds, and travelers checks.
- Purchasing, selling, servicing, or warehousing loans or other extensions of credit, or interests therein.
- Providing courier services between financial institutions.
- Providing management consulting, operational advice, and services for other financial institutions.
- Providing check guaranty, verification, and payment services.
- Providing data processing, data warehousing and data transmission products, services, and related activities and facilities, including associated equipment and technology, for the bank or its affiliates.
- Acting as investment adviser (including an adviser with investment discretion) or financial adviser or counselor to governmental entities or instrumentalities, businesses, or individuals, including advising registered investment companies and mortgage or real estate investment trusts, furnishing economic forecasts or other economic information, providing investment advice related to futures and options on futures, and providing consumer financial counseling.

- Providing tax planning and preparation services.
- Providing financial and transactional advice and assistance, including advice and assistance for customers in structuring, arranging, and executing mergers and acquisitions, divestitures, joint ventures, leveraged buyouts, swaps, foreign exchange, derivative transactions, coin and bullion, and capital restructurings.
- Underwriting and reinsuring credit related insurance to the extent permitted under section 302 of the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (GLBA).
- Leasing of personal property and acting as an agent or adviser in leases for others.
- Providing securities brokerage or acting as a futures commission merchant, and providing related credit and other related services.
- Underwriting and dealing, including making a market, in bank permissible securities and purchasing and selling as principal, asset backed obligations.
- Acting as an insurance agent or broker, including title insurance to the extent permitted under section 303 of the GLBA.
- Reinsuring mortgage insurance on loans originated, purchased, or serviced by the bank, its subsidiaries, or its affiliates, provided that if the subsidiary enters into a quota share agreement, the subsidiary assumes less than 50 percent of the aggregate insured risk covered by the quota share agreement. A “quota share agreement” is an agreement under which the reinsurer is liable to the primary insurance underwriter for an agreed upon percentage of every claim arising out of the covered book of business ceded by the primary insurance underwriter to the reinsurer.
- Acting as a finder to the extent permitted by published OCC precedent.
- Offering correspondent services to the extent permitted by published OCC precedent.
- Acting as agent or broker in the sale of fixed or variable annuities.
- Offering debt cancellation or debt suspension agreements.
- Providing real estate settlement, closing, escrow, and related services; and real estate appraisal services for the subsidiary, parent bank, or other financial institutions.
- Acting as a transfer or fiscal agent.

- Acting as a digital certification authority to the extent permitted by published OCC precedent, subject to the terms and conditions contained in that precedent.
- Providing or selling public transportation tickets, event and attraction tickets, gift certificates, prepaid phone cards, promotional and advertising material, postage stamps, and Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) script, and similar media, to the extent permitted by published OCC precedent, subject to the terms and conditions contained in that precedent.

For published precedents, see OCC's monthly publication "Interpretations and Actions," annual publication "Activities Permissible for A National Bank," or the Commerce Clearing House "Federal Banking Law Reporter."

When filing an after-the-fact notice, the bank must:

- Certify the bank and activity or activities are eligible for the after-the-fact notice process.
- Describe in detail the activity or activities to be conducted in the operating subsidiary. (Refer to Specific Requirements for Insurance if this represents the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular insurance company.)
- Describe the investment amount and the percentage of the bank's capital the investment represents.
- Represent that the proposed activity is being conducted and will be conducted according to the OCC policies contained in the guidance issued for this activity and subject to all terms, conditions, and restrictions applicable to national banks.

Standard Review

The OCC's standard review process is applicable when the activity of the operating subsidiary that the bank intends to acquire or establish (or a new activity in an existing operating subsidiary) does not qualify for an after-the-fact notice or when the bank is not eligible for an after-the fact notice. The OCC also will use the standard review process when the bank will control, but own 50 percent or less of, an operating subsidiary. A bank must submit an application and a filing fee to the OCC for the standard review process.

The OCC also may require the applicant to submit a legal analysis if the proposal is novel, unusually complex, or raises substantial unresolved legal issues. In such cases, the OCC encourages applicants to arrange a pre-filing meeting with the director for district licensing. Additionally, any bank subject to supervisory concerns should provide financial information to support the proposed transaction (for example, capital or strategic plan, cost projections, or pro forma financial projections).

Any bank filing under the standard operating subsidiary process must receive OCC's decision prior to establishing or acquiring the operating subsidiary or commencing any new activity in an existing operating subsidiary.

In an application, the bank must:

- Describe in detail the activity or activities to be conducted in the operating subsidiary. (Refer to Specific Requirements for Insurance if this represents the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular insurance company.)
- Certify that the bank owns more than 50 percent of the voting (or similar) interest of the subsidiary or describe how the bank controls or will control the subsidiary and its activities.
- Describe the investment amount and the percentage of the bank's capital that the investment represents.
- Represent that the proposed activity will be conducted according to the OCC policies contained in the guidance issued for this activity and subject to all terms, conditions, and restrictions applicable to national banks.

Specific Requirements

Insurance

Banks may conduct certain insurance activities in the bank or through an operating subsidiary. They may engage in certain title insurance activities, sell credit related insurance as an agent, and provide as principal (underwrite or reinsure) credit related insurance. An operating subsidiary may reinsure private mortgage insurance on loans originated, purchased, or serviced by the bank or its affiliates. Additionally, an operating subsidiary may underwrite municipal bond insurance, as well as safe deposit box insurance and business risk insurance of the bank and its affiliates. (See Appendix A for further discussion).

In addition, national banks located in a place with a population of less than 5,000 inhabitants (as shown by the preceding decennial census) are authorized expressly under 12 USC 92 to act "as the agent for any fire, life, or other insurance company." The OCC provided guidance on how bank insurance agents may conduct their insurance business under this authority in Interpretive Letter 753 \(November 4, 1996\).

Any subsidiary filing from a bank requesting to sell insurance from a "place of 5,000" under 12 USC 92 should include a representation that the bank's proposal to sell insurance will be consistent with Section 92 and the OCC's interpretation in Interpretive Letter 753 \(November 4, 1996\). Insurance sales activities also should be conducted in accordance with the operational standards and customer safeguards described in OCC issuances (see the Insurance Activities Handbook).

The applicant must describe the type of insurance activity in which the company is engaged and has plans to conduct, to the extent the application or notice relates to the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular company engaged in insurance activities (including a broker dealer selling annuities considered insurance products under state law). The bank also must list for each state the lines of business for which the company holds, or will hold, an insurance license, indicating the state in which the company holds a resident license or charter, as applicable.

Electronic Activities

A bank or its subsidiary may conduct certain activities using electronic technologies, provided the activities are part of, or incidental to, the business of banking. To determine if an electronic activity is part of the business of banking, the OCC considers whether it:

- Is the functional equivalent to, or a logical outgrowth of, a recognized banking activity.
- Strengthens the bank by benefiting its customers or its business.
- Involves the types of risk similar to those already assumed by banks.
- Is authorized for state-chartered banks.

To determine if an electronic activity is incidental to the business of banking, the OCC considers whether it:

- Facilitates the production or delivery of a bank's products or services.
- Enhances the bank's ability to sell or market its products or services.
- Improves the effectiveness or efficiency of the bank's operations in light of risks presented, innovations, strategies, techniques, and new technologies for producing and delivering financial products and services.
- Enables the bank to use capacity acquired for its banking operations or otherwise avoid economic waste or loss.

The bank, or its subsidiary, must conduct these electronic activities in a manner consistent with safety and soundness standards and OCC guidance. In addition, the OCC may require the bank or its operating subsidiary to notify all potential technology-related vendors in writing of the OCC's examination and regulatory authority. The OCC also may require that all final technology-related vendor contracts stipulate that the performance of services provided by the vendors to the operating subsidiary is subject to the OCC's examination and regulatory authority.

Fiduciary Powers

If a subsidiary proposes to accept traditional fiduciary appointments for which fiduciary powers are needed, as in acting as a trustee or an executor, then both the bank and the subsidiary should have fiduciary powers. Fiduciary powers for the subsidiary generally are accomplished by using a national bank limited to the activities of a trust company or a state trust company as the subsidiary. If a limited purpose national bank is proposed, the OCC processes the charter application together with the operating subsidiary application.

If a subsidiary proposes only to exercise investment discretion on behalf of its customers or to provide investment advice for a fee, but not accept traditional fiduciary appointment, the subsidiary does not have to have fiduciary powers, but the bank must have OCC approval to exercise fiduciary powers, unless the subsidiary:

- Is registered under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, or
- Is registered or has filed a notice under the applicable provisions of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 as a broker, dealer, municipal securities dealer, government securities broker, or government securities dealer; and the subsidiary's performance of investment advisory services is solely incidental to the conduct of its business as broker or dealer, and no special compensation is made to the subsidiary for those advisory services. To determine whether the subsidiary's performance of investment advisory services is solely incidental to the conduct of its business as a broker or dealer, and no special compensation is made to the subsidiary for those advisory services, the OCC will consider the commission structure and other specific facts. See OCC Interpretive Letter 769 \(January 28, 1997\).

Examination and Supervision

Each operating subsidiary is subject to OCC examination and supervision exclusively, to the same extent as the parent national bank, except where federal law specifically provides otherwise, such as when the activity is subject to functional regulation limitations and requirements. These functional regulation provisions were enacted in GLBA. GLBA codified the concept of "functional regulation," which recognizes the roles of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Commodities Futures Trading Commission, and state insurance commissioners as the regulators of securities, commodities, and insurance activities, respectively. The appropriate functional regulator is responsible for supervising the particular activities within the scope of its functional regulation, as defined under federal law. The jurisdictional scope of these functional regulators may be complex; and the functionally regulated activity also may be subject to OCC supervision for bank safety and soundness reasons or based on separate statutory authority. GLBA also established new standards limiting the OCC's ability to examine and seek reports on functionally regulated activities from a bank's subsidiaries and affiliates.

If the OCC determines that the creation or operation of the operating subsidiary violates a law, regulation, or written condition, or is unsafe or unsound, or threatens the safety and soundness of the bank, the OCC may direct the bank or subsidiary to take appropriate remedial action. Such action may include disposing of, or liquidating all or part of, the subsidiary or discontinuing specific activities. Refer to Related Organizations Handbook for further discussion of the OCC's examination and supervision of subsidiaries and other related organizations.

Locations

A bank proposing to establish, acquire, or operate an operating subsidiary at a location at which it will perform branching functions (deposits received, checks paid, or money lent) will need approval for a branch office at that location, if it has not already been authorized as a branch. A separate application and filing fee are not necessary, but a request for branch authorization should accompany the operating subsidiary application. There are no geographical restrictions for operating subsidiaries performing permissible activities other than core branching functions of receiving deposits, paying checks, or lending money.

Annual Reporting Requirement

The OCC requires that a bank file an annual report to identify its operating subsidiaries that do business directly with consumers in the United States and are not functionally regulated as defined in section 5(c)(5) of the BHCA, as amended (12 USC 1844(c)(5)). Specifically, an operating subsidiary does business directly with consumers if it provides products or services to individuals to be used primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.

The bank submits an annual report on its operating subsidiaries to the OCC on or before January 31 each year, containing information as of December 31 for the prior year. This report may be filed electronically via the National BankNet secure mailbox or by attaching the report to an e-mail. For specific guidance on filing this report, refer to OCC Bulletin 2004-55.

Applicability of Law

All laws and regulations, including state laws, apply to national bank operating subsidiaries to the same extent that they apply to the parent national bank, unless otherwise addressed in federal law or OCC regulation.

Holding Company Dissolution

A bank may elect to use a shell operating subsidiary to merge with a holding company to facilitate the liquidation or dissolution of the holding company. The application for the shell subsidiary formation must be filed along with the related business combination filing.

Generally, when filing, the holding company must represent that it has no outstanding liabilities, including contingent liabilities. Prior to transferring its assets to the operating subsidiary, it must divest of all assets ineligible for investment by a national bank and assume the merger cost prior to its dissolution, including all necessary payments to dissenting shareholders. All other regulatory approvals must still be obtained (for example, FRB approval or waiver of the application). (See the “Business Combinations” booklet for further details.)

Financial Subsidiaries

As authorized by the GLBA, a financial subsidiary is a corporation, limited liability company, or similar entity, controlled by one or more insured depository institutions. A financial subsidiary conducts activities that are “financial in nature” or incidental to financial activities. Financial subsidiaries are bank subsidiaries that are not operating subsidiaries (that is, subsidiaries engaged only in activities the bank may engage in directly under the same terms and conditions applicable to national banks) or subsidiaries that national banks otherwise are specifically authorized to control by the express terms of a federal statute. However, a financial subsidiary may perform activities permissible for national banks in addition to activities that are financial in nature or incidental to financial activities. For a bank to own an interest in a financial subsidiary, the bank and the subsidiary must meet certain requirements and comply with specified safeguards.

Qualifications

A bank may control, directly or indirectly, a financial subsidiary or hold an interest in a financial subsidiary only if:

- The bank and each depository institution affiliate of the bank, which includes any uninsured national trust bank, are “well capitalized” and “well managed” (see Glossary for definitions).
- The bank and each depository institution affiliate must have received a rating of “satisfactory” or better at its most recent Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) examination. A bank may not apply to commence any additional expanded financial activity, or to directly or indirectly acquire control of a company engaged in such activity, if it or any of its insured depository institution affiliates received a less than “satisfactory” CRA rating on its most recent CRA exam prior to when the bank would file its notice.

Banks that have not yet received a CRA rating, or special purpose banks which are not CRA rated, may submit a notice if they meet all of the other qualifications and safeguards.

- The aggregate consolidated total assets of all financial subsidiaries of the bank do not exceed the lesser of 45 percent of the consolidated total assets of the parent bank or $50 billion [or such greater amount as is determined according to an indexing mechanism jointly established by regulation by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board (Federal Reserve)].
- The bank has at least one issue of outstanding eligible debt (see Glossary) currently rated in one of the three highest investment grade ratings categories by a nationally recognized statistical rating organization if the bank is one of the 100 largest insured banks, determined on the basis of the bank’s consolidated total assets at the end of the calendar year.

If the national bank is one of the second 50 of the 100 largest insured banks, the bank may satisfy the eligible debt requirement either by having outstanding eligible debt or by satisfying alternative criteria the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve may establish jointly by regulations. Refer to the discussion in Related Organizations Handbook or 12 CFR 1501.3.

If the financial subsidiary is engaged solely in activities in an agency capacity, the eligible debt requirements do not apply.

Activities

A financial subsidiary may engage in:

- Activities that are financial in nature and activities incidental to a financial activity.

- Lending, exchanging, transferring, investing for others, or safeguarding money or securities.
 - Engaging as agent or broker in any state to insure, guarantee, or indemnify against loss, harm, damage, illness, disability, death, defects in title, or provide annuities as agent or broker.
 - Providing financial, investment, or economic advisory services, including advising an investment company as defined in section 3 of the Investment Company Act, 15 USC 80a-3.
 - Issuing or selling instruments representing interests in pools of assets permissible for a bank to hold directly.
 - Underwriting, dealing in, or making a market in securities.
 - Engaging in any activity the Federal Reserve has determined, by order or regulation in effect on November 12, 1999, to be so closely related to banking or managing or controlling banks as to be a proper incident thereto (subject to the same terms and conditions contained in the order or regulation, unless the order or regulation is modified by the Federal Reserve).
 - Engaging, in the United States, in any activity a bank holding company may engage in outside the United States and the Federal Reserve has determined, under regulations prescribed or interpretations issued pursuant to the BHCA as in effect on November 11, 1999, to be usual for the transaction of banking or other financial operations abroad.
- Activities that may be conducted by an operating subsidiary or by the bank directly, if it also performs activities that are financial in nature.

Exceptions

There are certain activities a financial subsidiary cannot engage in as principal:

- Insuring, guaranteeing, or indemnifying against loss, harm, damage, illness, disability or death, or defects in title, except to the extent permitted under GLBA (certain types of insurance underwriting and reinsurance the OCC permitted prior to January 1, 1999, are grandfathered) or providing or issuing annuities the income of which is subject to tax treatment under section 72 of the Internal Revenue Code.
- Real estate development or real estate investment, unless otherwise expressly authorized by law.
- Activities authorized for bank holding companies by section 4(k)(4)(H) or (I) of the BHCA (certain merchant banking investments), 12 USC 1843(k)(4)(H) or (I).

Safeguards

A bank is required to meet certain safety and soundness requirements when engaging in activities through a financial subsidiary. Specifically, a bank establishing a financial subsidiary must:

- For regulatory capital purposes, deduct the aggregate amount of its outstanding equity investment, including retained earnings, in its financial subsidiaries from its total assets and tangible equity and deduct such investment from its total risk-based capital (this deduction must be made equally from Tier 1 and Tier 2 capital).
- Not consolidate its assets and liabilities with those of its financial subsidiary or subsidiaries.
- Ensure that any published financial statements of the bank, in addition to providing information prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, separately present financial information for the bank in a manner reflecting the capital adjustments previously described.
- Have reasonable policies and procedures to preserve the separate corporate identity and limited liability of the bank and its financial subsidiaries.
- Have procedures for identifying and managing operational and financial risk within the bank and the financial subsidiary that adequately protect the bank from those risks.
- Apply sections 23A and 23B of the Federal Reserve Act, as implemented by Regulation W (12 CFR 223), to transactions with a financial subsidiary in the following manner:
 - A financial subsidiary shall be deemed to be an affiliate and shall not be deemed to be a subsidiary of the bank. A subsidiary that is a financial subsidiary solely because it performs insurance or insurance brokerage activities is not an affiliate for purposes of Regulation W.
 - The quantitative limitations on covered transactions with any individual affiliate shall not apply to covered transactions between a bank and its financial subsidiary.
 - The bank's investment in the financial subsidiary shall not include earnings retained or losses incurred by the financial subsidiary.
 - Any purchase of, or investment in, the securities of a financial subsidiary of a bank by an affiliate of the bank will be considered to be a purchase of, or investment in, such securities by the bank.
 - Any extension of credit by an affiliate of a bank to a financial subsidiary of the bank is considered an extension of credit by the bank to the financial subsidiary if the extension of credit is treated as capital of the financial subsidiary under applicable law.

- Any other extension of credit by an affiliate of the bank to its financial subsidiary is considered an extension of credit by the bank to the financial subsidiary if the Federal Reserve determines that such treatment is necessary or appropriate to prevent evasions of the Federal Reserve Act or the GLBA.
- Deem the financial subsidiary a subsidiary of a bank holding company and not a subsidiary of the bank for purposes of the anti-tying prohibitions.

Filing Process

The GLBA requires OCC approval of financial subsidiaries to be based only on specific statutory factors. The OCC considers financial subsidiary notices to be approved upon receipt of the bank's submission of a notice with the appropriate certifications that it meets the required criteria. There are two options for filing a notice to acquire control of, or hold an interest in, a financial subsidiary, or to commence a new activity in an existing financial subsidiary.

Under the first option, the bank files a "Financial Subsidiary Certification" at any time with its appropriate director for district licensing and files the subsequent notice for OCC approval whenever it is ready to acquire control of, or hold an interest in, a financial subsidiary, or to commence a new activity in an existing financial subsidiary.

Under the second method, the bank files a combined "Certification and Notice" five business days before it acquires control of, or holds an interest in, a financial subsidiary, or commences a new activity in an existing financial subsidiary.

Certification with Subsequent Notice

When filing a "Financial Subsidiary Certification," the bank must provide:

- A list of the bank's depository institution affiliates.
- Certification that the bank and each depository institution affiliate is "well capitalized," "well managed," and has not received a rating of less than "satisfactory" at its most recent CRA examination.

After completing the formal certification, whenever the bank seeks OCC approval to acquire or hold an interest in any financial subsidiary, the bank must file a written "Financial Subsidiary Notice" with the appropriate director for district licensing when it commences operations. This notice must:

- State that the bank's certification remains valid.
- Describe in detail the activity or activities to be conducted in the financial subsidiary. (Refer to Specific Requirements for Insurance if this represents the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular insurance company.)
- Cite the specific authority permitting the activity to be conducted within a financial subsidiary. (Include a copy of the order or interpretation if the authority relied upon is an agency order or interpretation under Sections 4(c)(8) or 4(c)(13) of the BHCA.)

- Certify that the bank will remain “well capitalized” after deducting the aggregate amount of the bank’s outstanding equity investment, including retained earnings, in its financial subsidiaries from its assets and tangible equity and deducting such investment from its total risk-based capital (this deduction is made equally from Tier 1 and Tier 2 capital).
- Demonstrate that the aggregate consolidated total assets of all the financial subsidiaries of the bank do not exceed the lesser of 45 percent of the bank’s consolidated total assets or $50 billion (or the increased level established by the Federal Reserve or the Secretary of Treasury).
- Certify that the bank meets the eligible debt requirement, if applicable. If the financial subsidiary is acting solely as agent, this certification is not necessary.

Combined Certification and Notice

As a second option, a bank may file a combined “Financial Subsidiary Certification and Notice” with the appropriate director for district licensing at least five business days before acquiring control of, or an interest in, a financial subsidiary, or before starting a new activity in an existing financial subsidiary. This certification and notice must provide all the information and certifications as outlined previously for a certification with subsequent notice.

Examination and Supervision

Each financial subsidiary is subject to OCC examination and supervision. However, some financial subsidiaries are subject to functional regulation limitations and requirements. These functional regulation provisions were enacted in GLBA. GLBA codified the concept of “functional regulation,” which recognizes the roles of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Commodities Futures Trading Commission, and state insurance commissioners as the primary regulators of certain securities, commodities, and insurance activities of banks. The appropriate functional regulator is responsible for supervising the particular activities. However, the functionally regulated activity remains subject to OCC’s supervision for bank safety and soundness reasons or potentially subject to OCC’s supervision based on separate statutory authority. GLBA also established new standards limiting the OCC’s ability to examine and seek reports on functionally regulated activities from a bank’s subsidiaries and affiliates.

If the OCC determines that the creation or operation of the financial subsidiary violates a law, regulation, or written condition, or is unsafe or unsound, or threatens the safety and soundness of the bank, the OCC may direct the bank or subsidiary to take appropriate remedial action. Such action may include disposing of, or liquidating all or part of, the subsidiary or discontinuing a specific activity. Refer to Related Organizations Handbook for further discussion of the OCC’s examination and supervision of subsidiaries and other related organizations.

Failure to Continue to Meet Qualifications

The bank and its affiliated depository institutions must continue to satisfy the qualification requirements and safeguards following its acquisition of, control of, or an interest in, a financial subsidiary. A bank failing to continue to satisfy these requirements will be subject to the following procedures and requirements:

- The OCC must give written notice to the bank (and, in the case of an affiliated depository institution, to that depository institution's appropriate federal banking agency) outlining how or why the bank or its affiliated depository institution does not continue to meet the qualification requirements. The bank shall be deemed to have received the notice three business days after the OCC mails the letter.
- The bank must execute an agreement, no later than 45 days after the receipt of the notice, with the OCC to comply with the qualification requirements, unless the OCC grants the bank additional time.
- The OCC may impose limitations on the conduct or activities of the bank or any subsidiary of the bank as the OCC determines appropriate under the circumstances.
- The OCC may require the bank to divest control of a financial subsidiary if the bank does not correct the conditions within 180 days after receipt of the letter.

A bank no longer meeting the eligible debt qualification, if applicable, may not directly or through a subsidiary purchase or acquire any additional equity capital of any financial subsidiary until the bank again meets the qualification.

Bank Service Company

A bank service company is a corporation, whose capital stock is owned by one or more insured banks, or a limited liability company, whose members are insured banks. Banks specifically are authorized to invest in bank service companies by the express terms of the Bank Service Company Act. If the bank service company has national and state bank shareholders or members, the activities conducted must be permissible for all of the insured banks. Also all shareholders or members must be located in the same state, unless the FRB approves an exception. When two or more national banks wish to invest in the same bank service company, one filing on behalf of all of the individual investors may be made as long as the other national banks are identified. The OCC requires only one filing fee. A bank may not invest (see Glossary) more than 10 percent of its capital and surplus in any bank service company, and the bank's total investment in all bank service companies may not exceed 5 percent of the bank's total assets.

A bank seeking to establish a bank service company may do so without giving notice to the OCC if it only provides certain services to depository institutions. Otherwise, the bank will be required to provide an application or an after-the-fact notice, depending on the activity being performed. The bank will need to determine if the activity or geographic locations where services are provided would require a filing with the OCC. The OCC does not require a filing if a bank invests in the capital stock or equity of a bank service company performing any service (other than deposit taking) at any geographical location the Federal Reserve has determined by regulation to be permissible for a bank holding company. In such cases, however, the bank must obtain the approval of the Federal Reserve.

Filing Process

A bank intending to make an investment in a bank service company, or to perform a new activity in a bank service company, generally must submit an application and receive prior approval from the OCC. The application must include:

- The name and location of the bank service company.
- A detailed description of the activity or activities to be conducted in the bank service company. (Refer to Specific Requirements for Insurance if this represents the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular insurance company.)
- Information demonstrating that the bank will comply with investment limitations.
- Information demonstrating that the bank service company and all the banks investing in it are located in the same state, unless the Federal Reserve has approved an exception to this requirement.
- Information demonstrating that the bank service company will conduct these activities only at locations in a state where the investing bank could be authorized to perform the activities directly.

If there is more than one investing bank, the bank with the largest dollar amount invested is deemed to be the principal investor (see Glossary).

Decision Criteria

The OCC generally will grant approval for the investment in a bank service company, provided that:

- The proposed activity is legally permissible.
- The activity is consistent with safe and sound banking practices.
- The bank's performance of the activity is not in contravention of OCC policy.

The OCC will consider a bank's request to invest in a bank service company and make a final decision within 60 days of the date it receives the filing. If the OCC fails to make a decision within that time, the investment is deemed to be approved, unless the OCC notifies the bank of significant supervisory or compliance concerns or legal or policy issues.

After-the-Fact Notice

No prior OCC approval is required if the bank service company engages only in those activities eligible for an after-the-fact notice under 12 CFR 5.34\(e\)\(5\)\(v\), and the bank is "well capitalized" as defined in 12 CFR 6.4(b) and "well managed" (see Glossary for definitions). A bank may invest in a bank service company, or perform a new activity in an existing bank service company, by providing the appropriate director for district licensing written notice within 10 days of making the investment. The written notice must include:

- A complete description of the bank's investment in the bank service company.
- A detailed description of the activity or activities to be conducted in the bank service company. (Refer to Specific Requirements for Insurance if this represents the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular insurance company.)
- A representation and undertaking that the activity will be conducted in accordance with OCC published guidance. (Any bank filing a notice is deemed to have agreed the bank service company will conduct the activity in a manner consistent with published OCC guidance.)

No Filing Required

No filing is required for a bank service company that provides the following services only for depository institutions:

- Check and deposit posting and sorting.
- Computation and posting of interest and other credits and charges.
- Preparation and mailing of checks, statements, notices, and similar items.
- Any other clerical, bookkeeping, accounting, statistical, or similar function.

Additionally, the OCC does not require a filing if a bank invests in the capital stock or equity of a bank service company performing any service (other than deposit taking) at any geographical location the Federal Reserve has determined by regulation to be permissible for a bank holding company. In such cases, however, the bank must obtain the approval of the Federal Reserve.

Examination and Supervision

Each bank service company is subject to examination and supervision by the federal banking agency that supervises the bank that is the principal investor in the company. The appropriate federal banking agency will supervise the bank service company to the same extent that it supervises the bank that is the principal investor, subject to applicable functional regulation limitations and requirements. A bank that is regularly examined by an appropriate federal banking agency, or any subsidiary or affiliate that is subject to examination by the regularly examined bank's federal banking regulator, may have services performed by a bank service company. The services performed are subject to examination and supervision to the same extent as if the bank itself performed the services on its own premises. The services performed by a bank service company may be subject to functional regulation limitations and requirements to the extent the bank service company performing the services meets the GLBA definition of a functionally regulated subsidiary or functionally regulated affiliate. These functional regulation provisions were enacted in GLBA. GLBA codified the concept of “functional regulation,” which recognizes the roles of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Commodities Futures Trading Commission, and state insurance commissioners as the primary regulators of certain securities, commodities, and insurance activities of banks. The appropriate functional regulator is responsible for supervising the particular activities. However, the functionally regulated activity remains subject to OCC supervision for bank safety and soundness reasons or potentially based on separate statutory authority. GLBA also established new standards limiting the OCC’s ability to examine and seek reports on functionally regulated activities from a bank’s subsidiaries and affiliates.

If the OCC determines that the creation or operation of the bank service company violates a law, regulation, or written condition, or is unsafe or unsound, or threatens the safety and soundness of the bank, the OCC may direct the bank or bank service company to take appropriate remedial action. Such action may include disposing of or liquidating all or part of the bank service company or discontinuing specific activities. Refer to Related Organizations Handbook for further discussion of the OCC’s examination and supervision of subsidiaries and other related organizations.

Other Equity Investments

A national bank is permitted to make equity investments in various types of corporations, partnerships, trusts, or similar types of entities pursuant to 12 USC 24(Seventh) and other statutes. These investments may be in statutory subsidiaries or noncontrolling investments in entities, when the investment is part of or incidental to the business of banking. These investments are in addition to operating subsidiaries, financial subsidiaries, and bank service companies.

Pursuant to 12 CFR 24, a national bank may create a subsidiary corporation to promote public welfare, including the welfare of low- and moderate-income communities and families, such as providing housing, services, or jobs (see Community Development Investments, Related Organizations Handbook for specific discussion).

Statutory Subsidiaries

A bank may make a controlling and noncontrolling equity investment in the following statutory subsidiaries without prior approval of the OCC:

- An agricultural credit corporation. A bank may purchase stock of a corporation organized to make loans to farmers and ranchers for agricultural purposes for its own account. Such equity investments in agricultural credit corporations are authorized under 12 USC 24(Seventh) and are limited to 20 percent of the unimpaired capital and surplus of the bank, unless it owns at least 80 percent of the stock of the agricultural credit corporation. This requires an after-the-fact notice.
- A banker’s bank. A bank may invest up to 10 percent of its capital and surplus in an insured banker’s bank or in the holding company of such a bank, provided that it does not own more than 5 percent of any class of voting securities.

- A safe deposit corporation. Investment in a safe deposit corporation organized under state law may not exceed 15 percent of the bank's unimpaired, paid-in capital and 15 percent of its unimpaired surplus.
- A state housing corporation. A bank may make an equity investment in any state housing corporation incorporated in the state in which the bank is located, provided that its investments do not exceed 5 percent of its unimpaired, paid-in capital stock plus 5 percent of its unimpaired surplus fund.
- A small business investment company (SBIC). A bank may purchase SBIC stock provided that the aggregate amount of such investments does not exceed 5 percent of the bank's capital and surplus.
- A community development corporation. A bank may invest in or conduct activities in such an entity that primarily benefit low- and moderate-income individuals, low- and moderate-income areas, or other areas targeted by a governmental entity for redevelopment. If an eligible bank, this requires an after-the-fact notice to the Director, Community Development Division (12 CFR 24).
- A savings association. A savings association will be eligible to be acquired because it is in default, experiencing severe financial difficulty, or is otherwise determined by the FDIC to need financial assistance, at a time when severe financial conditions threaten the stability of a significant number of savings associations, or of savings associations possessing significant financial resources. The OCC will consider a savings association acquired under this authority (12 USC 1823(k)) to be a "statutory subsidiary." For a bank to otherwise own or control a federal savings association (FSA), the FSA must be a financial subsidiary unless the FSA undertakes to limit its activities to those permissible for a national bank. Additional information and guidance may be found in the "Financial Subsidiaries" section of this booklet. This requires an after-the-fact notice.
- A bank premises corporation. A bank may invest in its bank premises or in a corporation holding the bank's premises. Such equity investments in bank premises corporations have been characterized as statutory subsidiaries, and not operating subsidiaries. These equity investments do not require prior approval unless the investment exceeds the limitation for investing in bank premises. (See "Investment in Bank Premises" booklet).
- Any other equity investment that may be authorized by statute after February 12, 1990, if not covered by other applicable OCC regulation. This requires an after-the-fact notice.

Filing Process: Generally, a bank must provide a written notice to the appropriate director for district licensing within 10 days of making an equity investment in a statutory subsidiary. The written notice must include a description and the amount of the bank's investment. The OCC reserves the right to require additional information as necessary.

Noncontrolling Investments

Banks also may make noncontrolling equity investments in certain types of entities when the investment is part of, or incidental to, the business of banking. Investments of this type are permitted under a national bank's powers under 12 USC 24(Seventh) and 12 CFR 5.36(e). Refer to Appendix B for a summary of noncontrolling investments.

A noncontrolling investment may be made directly by the bank or through its operating subsidiary. The bank must satisfy the following standards to make such an investment:

- The activities of the entity or enterprise in which the investment is made must be limited to activities that are part of, or incidental to, the business of banking, or are otherwise authorized for a national bank.
- The bank must be able to prevent the enterprise from engaging in activities not meeting the foregoing standard or be able to withdraw its investment.
- The bank's loss exposure must be limited, as a legal and accounting matter, and the bank must not have open-ended liability for the obligations of the enterprise.
- The investment must be convenient or useful to the bank in carrying out its business and not a mere passive investment unrelated to the banking business.

To use the after-the-fact notice, the investments must be in an enterprise whose activity is listed under 12 CFR 5.34\(e\)\(5\)\(v\) or in activities that are substantively the same as those contained in a published OCC precedent approving a noncontrolling investment, provided the activities will be conducted under the same terms and conditions as stated in the precedent. For published precedents, see OCC's monthly publication "Interpretations and Actions," "Activities Permissible For A National Bank," or the Commerce Clearing House Federal Banking Law Reporter.

If the bank is not eligible to file a notice or wishes to make other types of equity investments, it may request a legal opinion from the OCC about whether the proposed investment is permissible.

Filing Process: A qualifying bank making a noncontrolling investment, directly or through an operating subsidiary, may file a written notice with the appropriate director for district licensing no later than 10 days after making the investment. The OCC considers these notices to be approved upon receipt of the bank's submission. The bank must certify in the notice that it meets the required criteria. The written notice must:

- Describe the structure of the investment and the activity or activities conducted by the enterprise in which the bank is investing. (Refer to Specific Requirements for Insurance if this represents the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular insurance company.)
- State which paragraphs of 12 CFR 5.34\(e\)\(5\)\(v\) describe the activity or activities, or state and describe how the activity is substantially the same as that contained in a published OCC precedent approving a noncontrolling investment by a bank or its operating subsidiary. If the activity or activities are substantially the same as in a published OCC precedent, certify that the activity will be conducted in accordance with the same terms and conditions applicable to the activity covered by the precedent, and provide the citation to the applicable precedent.

- Certify that the bank is “well capitalized” and “well managed” at the time of the investment (refer to Glossary for definitions).
- Describe how the bank can prevent the enterprise from engaging in activities not included in 12 CFR 5.34\(e\)\(5\)\(v\) or in a published OCC precedent approving a noncontrolling investment by a bank or its operating subsidiary, or how the bank otherwise can withdraw its investment.
- Certify that the bank will account for its investment under the equity or cost method of accounting. For investments that may be subject to the Financial Accounting Standards Board’s Interpretation No. 46, Consolidation of Variable Interest Entities, the bank should consult with its accountant to determine how the bank should account for its investment and contact the appropriate director for district licensing to determine how to comply with this certification.
- Describe how the investment is convenient and useful to the bank in carrying out its business and not a mere passive investment unrelated to the banking business.
- Certify that the bank’s loss exposure is limited, as a legal and accounting matter, and that the bank does not have open-ended liability for the obligations of the enterprise.
- Certify that the enterprise in which the bank is investing agrees to be subject to OCC supervision and examination, subject to the limitations and requirements of 12 USC 1820a and 1831v.

The OCC reserves the right to require additional information as necessary.

After-the-fact Notice

Prefiling

Licensing Staff

1. Refers a bank requesting instructions to the "General Polices and Procedures" booklet and this booklet of the Comptroller's Licensing Manual.

Filing the Notice

Bank

2. Submits a complete "After-the-fact Notice" (notice) to the appropriate director for district licensing.

The operating subsidiary or bank service company notice must provide:

- A certification that the bank is "well capitalized" and "well managed," (see Glossary) and that the bank and activity or activities are eligible for the notice process.
- A complete description of the investment in the operating subsidiary or bank service company, including the amount of the investment and the percent of bank's capital the investment represents.
- A complete description of the activity, including the paragraph(s) of 12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(v) that are applicable. To the extent the notice relates to the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular company engaged in insurance activities (including a broker dealer selling annuities that are considered insurance products under state law), provide a description of the type of insurance activity in which the company is engaged and has present plans to conduct. The bank must also list for each state the lines of business for which the company holds, or will hold, an insurance license, indicating the state in which the company holds a resident license or charter, as applicable.
- The date the activity commenced or the investment was made.
- A representation and undertaking stating that the activity or activities are conducted and will continue to be conducted in a manner consistent with OCC guidance and under the same terms and conditions as applicable if the activity were conducted directly by the bank.

Review

Licensing Staff

3. Initiates and enters appropriate information into the Corporate Activities Information System (CAIS).
4. Establishes the official file to maintain all original documents.
5. Reviews the notice and verifies that:
 - The bank is “well capitalized” and “well managed” (see Glossary).
 - The description of the activity meets the regulatory criteria under 12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(v) and the Operating Subsidiary Guidelines.
 - It contains the required notice criteria in step 2.
6. If the notice is sufficient, sends an acknowledgment letter to the bank, providing a copy to the appropriate assistant deputy comptroller (ADC) or large bank EIC and supervisory analyst. Proceeds to step 9.

If the notice relates to an investment in a company engaged in insurance activities (including a broker dealer selling annuities that are considered insurance under state law), prepares a cover letter and forwards a copy of the notice to the insurance commissioner of the state in which the company holds a resident license or charter, as applicable.

Proceed to step 9.

7. If the notice is insufficient or filed incorrectly, contacts the bank for clarification or the missing information.
8. Reviews any additional information. If the notice is sufficient, sends an acknowledgment letter to the bank, providing a copy to the appropriate assistant deputy comptroller (ADC) or large bank EIC and supervisory analyst.

If the notice relates to an investment in a company engaged in insurance activities (including a broker dealer selling annuities that are considered insurance under state law), prepares a cover letter and forwards a copy of the notice to the insurance commissioner of the state in which the company holds a resident license or charter, as applicable.

Close Out

9. Makes appropriate CAIS entries.
10. Reviews the file for completeness and forwards the file to Central Records.

Application

Prefiling

Licensing Staff

1. Refers a bank that requests instructions to the "General Polices and Procedures" booklet and this booklet of the Comptroller's Licensing Manual.
2. Arranges a prefiling meeting with the applicant, if appropriate. Attendees should include the appropriate OCC staff (for example, headquarters Licensing (HQ LIC), legal, supervision, compliance, community development, economics).
3. If any prefiling discussions or meetings reveal policy, legal, supervisory, or other novel issues, contacts HQ LIC to decide:
 - If the application should be filed with HQ LIC (broad policy or legal issues),
 - If specific issues should be separated from the application to be handled by HQ LIC, while the application continues to be processed by the district licensing staff, or
 - When the filing should be forwarded to HQ LIC.
4. Prepares a summary memorandum of policy or legal issues identified and retains all pertinent information in the pending file.

Filing the Application

Bank

5. Submits a complete operating subsidiary or bank service company application (filing) and a filing fee to the appropriate director for district licensing.

Operating Subsidiary

The standard operating subsidiary filing must provide:

- A complete description of:
 - The bank's investment in the subsidiary.

- The investment amount and the percentage of the bank’s capital the investment represents.
- The proposed activities of the subsidiary. To the extent the notice relates to the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular company engaged in insurance activities (including a broker dealer selling annuities that are considered insurance products under state law), provide a description of the type of insurance activity in which the company is engaged and has present plans to conduct. The bank must also list for each state the lines of business for which the company holds, or will hold, an insurance license, indicating the state in which the company holds a resident license or charter, as applicable.
- The organizational structure and management of the subsidiary.
- The relationship between the bank and the subsidiary.
- Any other information necessary to describe the proposal adequately.
- The location(s) of the proposed activity, stating if any activity will be conducted at a location other than the main office or a previously approved branch of the bank.
- A representation that the proposed activity will be conducted according to the OCC policies contained in guidance issued for this activity.
- An opinion of counsel or a legal analysis supporting the proposal if it is novel, unusually complex, or raises substantial unresolved legal issues.
- If the activity involves investment discretion:
 - Request approval to exercise fiduciary powers and include the additional information required by 12 CFR 5.26.
 - State that the bank has approval to exercise fiduciary powers.
 - State that the subsidiary is registered or will be registered as an investment adviser with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 or as a broker dealer under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

Bank Service Company

The standard bank service company filing must provide:

- The name and location of the bank service company.
- A complete description of the activities that the bank service company will conduct. To the extent the notice relates to the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular company engaged in insurance activities (including a broker dealer selling annuities that are considered insurance products under state law), provide a description of the type of insurance activity in which the company is engaged and has present plans to conduct. The bank must also list for each state the lines of business for which the company holds, or will hold, an insurance license, indicating the state in which the company holds a resident license or charter, as applicable.

- Information demonstrating that the bank will comply with the regulatory investment limitations.
- Information demonstrating that the bank service company and all banks investing in it are located in the same state, unless the Federal Reserve Bank has approved an exception to this requirement under the authority of 12 USC 1865(b).
- Information demonstrating that the bank service company will conduct those activities only at locations in a state in which the investing bank could be authorized to perform them directly, unless the Federal Reserve has approved an exception to this requirement under the authority of 12 USC 1865(b).

Review

Licensing Staff

6. Initiates and enters appropriate information into the Corporate Activities Information System (CAIS).
7. Establishes the official file to maintain all original documents.
8. Forwards the correct filing fee and the deposit memorandum to: Comptroller of the Currency, Attention: Accounts Receivable, 250 E Street SW, MS-4-8, Washington, DC 20219. Retains a copy of the memorandum for the file. (Requests a filing fee if not received.)
9. Sends a letter within five business days of receipt, notifying the bank that its filing will be processed under the standard review process and that the activity cannot begin until the OCC provides written approval for the operating subsidiary (or within 60 days of receipt for a bank service company).
10. Reviews the filing and any other relevant information about the bank. If the filing presents novel, legal or policy issues, repeats step 3 and forwards a memo to HQ LIC.
11. Within five business days of receipt, notifies appropriate ADC or large bank EIC and supervisory analyst of the filing and solicits comments, as appropriate, from district counsel, supervision, and other OCC divisions with a preliminary response required by the 15th day after the filing date. For undercapitalized banks, contacts the supervisory office for capital plan status.
12. Requires the bank to submit additional information or legal analysis, including a specific date for reply, if the activity of the proposed subsidiary or bank service company is unclear, the legality is in doubt, or if additional information is necessary to make a decision about the permissibility of the proposed investment.

Decision

Licensing Staff

13. Prepares the confidential memorandum and decision letter, recommending a decision to the delegated official.
14. Decides application under delegated authority or forwards the official file to HQ LIC for decision. If referred to HQ LIC, go to step 17.
15. Notifies the bank by telephone after the decision and sends the bank a decision letter, with a copy to the appropriate ADC or large bank EIC and supervisory analyst. (Decision letter, if applicable, will include any written conditions or supervisory concerns.)
16. If the notice relates to an investment in a company engaging in insurance activities, including a broker or dealer selling annuities that are considered insurance under state law, forwards a copy of the notice with a brief cover letter to the insurance commissioner of the state in which the company holds a resident license or charter, as applicable.
17. Makes appropriate CAIS entries. Proceed to step 24.

HQ LIC

18. Reviews the file and solicits comments from other OCC divisions, as appropriate.
19. Prepares and sends the confidential memorandum and decision letter, recommending a decision to the delegated official.
20. The financial subsidiary notice must:

- Be labeled “Financial Subsidiary Notice.”
- Attest that the bank’s financial subsidiary certification remains valid.
- Describe the activity or activities to be performed in the financial subsidiary.
- If a notice relates to the initial affiliation of the bank with a particular company involved in insurance activities (including a broker or dealer selling annuities that are considered insurance products under state law), describe the type of insurance activity that the company is engaged in and has present plans to conduct and list for each state the lines of business for which the company holds, or will hold, an insurance license, indicating the state in which the company holds a resident license or charter, as applicable.
- Cite the specific authority permitting the activity to be conducted within a financial subsidiary. Include a copy of the order or interpretation if the authority relied upon is an agency order or interpretation under sections 4(c)(8) or 4(c)(13) of the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 USC 1843(c)(8) or (c)(13).
- Certify that the bank will remain “well capitalized” after deducting the aggregate amount of its outstanding equity investment, including retained earnings, in its financial subsidiaries from the assets and tangible equity of the bank and deducting such investment from its total risk-based capital (this deduction shall be made equally from Tier 1 and Tier 2 capital).
- Demonstrate that the aggregate consolidated total assets of all the financial subsidiaries of the national bank do not exceed the lesser of 45 percent of the bank’s consolidated total assets or $50 billion (this $50 billion limit is subject to adjustment according to an indexing mechanism established jointly by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve).

- Certify that the bank meets the eligible debt requirement of 12 CFR 5.39(g)(3), if applicable. If the financial subsidiary is acting solely as agent, this certification is not necessary.

- A statement as to:
 - Which paragraph(s) of 12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(v) describes the activities, or
 - How the activities are substantively the same as that contained in a published OCC precedent (with citations provided), approving a noncontrolling investment by a bank or its operating subsidiary, with a statement that such activity will be conducted under the same terms and conditions applicable to the activity covered by the precedent.

- A description of how the bank can prevent the enterprise from engaging in activities not contained in 12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(v) or in a published OCC precedent approving a noncontrolling investment by a national bank or its operating subsidiary, or how the bank can withdraw its investment.
- A description of how the investment is convenient and useful to the bank in carrying out its business and not merely a passive investment unrelated to the bank's banking business.
- A statement certifying that:
 - The bank will account for its investment under the equity or cost method of accounting.
 - The bank's loss exposure is limited, as a legal and accounting matter, and the bank does not have open-ended liability for the obligations of the enterprise.
 - The enterprise in which the bank is investing agrees to be subject to OCC supervision and examination, subject to the limitations and requirements of 12 USC 1820a and 1831v.

Appendix A: Operating Subsidiary Guidelines

Introduction

These guidelines describe those activities of national banks that the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) has determined may be performed in an operating subsidiary under the after-the-fact notice procedure available in the OCC's operating subsidiary regulation.¹ The citations given in the guidelines for each of the activities listed provide examples of OCC approvals.²

Operating Subsidiary Activities [5.34(e)(5)(v)]

(A) Holding and managing assets acquired by the parent bank, including investment assets and property acquired by the bank through foreclosure or otherwise in good faith to compromise a doubtful claim, or in the ordinary course of collecting a debt previously contracted.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may hold and manage assets acquired by the parent bank or the operating subsidiary, including investment assets and property acquired in satisfaction of debts previously contracted (DPC).

Investment Assets

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may own, hold, and manage all or part of the parent bank's investment securities portfolio in accordance with the bank's investment guidelines. Such activity is permissible as part of, or incidental to, the business of banking. Moreover, a national bank or its operating subsidiary "may purchase for its own account investment securities under such limitations and restrictions as the OCC may by regulation prescribe."³ The OCC's Investment Securities Regulations at 12 CFR 1 prescribe limitations and restrictions on the purchase of an investment security by a national bank for its own account. These restrictions similarly apply to a national bank's operating subsidiary. Limits on securities activities in Part 1 generally are applied to the bank and the operating subsidiary combined.

DPC Property

Title 12 USC 29 governs the treatment of real property taken DPC. Banks should consult 12 CFR 34, Subpart E, "Other Real Estate Owned," for specific information on the treatment of DPC real estate. In addition, banks are authorized to take other property DPC under 12 USC 24 (Seventh), for sale to reduce the bank's losses on the underlying debts. A bank may take appropriate steps to preserve the property's value for sale. For example, if a national bank takes corporate stock DPC, it has the implied power to operate the corporation's business, particularly when the resale value depends on its uninterrupted operation, provided that the purpose of operating the corporation's business is not to speculate on its future value.

¹12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(iv) and (v).

² The narrative section of this Investment in Subsidiaries and Equities booklet (booklet) provides further information on the requirements governing the use of the after-the-fact notice procedure.

³ 12 USC 24(Seventh).

Generally, real property must be disposed of within five years and cannot be used for speculation. Transfer of the DPC assets to the operating subsidiary does not alter the limitations on the bank's holding period for that asset. The property need not have been collateral for the loan in question. The OCC may extend that period up to five additional years if the bank has made a good faith attempt to dispose of the real estate within the five-year period or its disposal within that period would be detrimental to the bank.

A national bank also may hold securities in satisfaction of DPC for five years. This holding period also may be extended up to an additional five years upon a clearly convincing demonstration of why an additional holding period is needed.⁴ An operating subsidiary that acquires stock of the parent bank must dispose of it within six months.⁵

Operating subsidiaries established by the notice procedure to engage in DPC activity also may enter into arrangements as a general or limited partner with depository or nondepository co-lenders to engage in the orderly acquisition, management, and disposition of DPC assets stemming from the parent bank's loans.⁶ DPC partnership activity must be conducted as follows: (1) the partnership must be limited to the acquisition, management, and disposition of the DPC assets; (2) partners will be limited to co-lenders and their agents; (3) the DPC assets must be disposed of promptly within the previously described guidelines; and (4) the bank must maintain at its headquarters office and make available to OCC examiners current information on all DPC assets activities of its operating subsidiary, including the name and location of each operating subsidiary, each partnership and relevant agreement, and each DPC asset being held pending disposition.

National banks establishing operating subsidiaries that will engage in debt-equity swap transactions⁷ must follow the standard processing procedures in section 5.34.

(B) Providing services to or for the bank or its affiliates, including accounting, auditing, appraising, advertising and public relations, and financial advice and consulting.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide internal operation services for the parent bank, its holding company, and their subsidiaries.⁸ These services generally relate to the day-to-day operations of those entities.⁹ Real estate appraisal services are covered at 12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(v)(V).

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide advice, opinions, research, analyses, reports and other information and opinion on any financial matter to any affiliate of the operating subsidiary. Banks typically develop financial information and analysis internally.

(C) Making loans or other extensions of credit, and selling money orders, savings bonds, and travelers checks.

Making loans or other extensions of credit

National banks and their operating subsidiaries possess broad authority to engage in lending and lending-related activities. Subject to safety and soundness guidelines, they may originate (including asset-based lending) loans or other extensions of credit for the bank's or subsidiary's account, or for the account of others. These activities are permitted for any type of loan, or interest therein, including, among other things, consumer loans, accounts receivable, credit card loans, commercial loans, residential mortgage loans, and commercial real estate loans. For purposes of this section, however, only lending activities that: (1) are well-established activities previously approved by the OCC; and (2) do not raise significant policy or supervisory issues, qualify for after-the-fact notice filings under 12 CFR Part 5. For example, derivatives transactions are not considered lending transactions for purposes of this section. Also, operating subsidiaries structured as real estate investment trusts do not qualify for after-the-fact notice filings if the size of the minority interest to be created is greater than the lesser of 1 percent of the bank's Tier 1 capital or $1 million. Any bank that considers establishing a REIT as an operating subsidiary is strongly encouraged to consult first with the OCC.

Except for lending limit, affiliate-transaction, and insider-transaction restrictions, lending is generally permitted without a quantitative limit, but when performed for the bank's or subsidiary's own account, may be subject to geographic restrictions under the McFadden Act.

Real estate loans and certain other types of loans are also subject to certain additional restrictions discussed as follows.

Personal and Commercial Loans

National banks and their operating subsidiaries are authorized expressly to lend money on personal security.¹⁰ They may also discount, purchase, and negotiate drafts, bills of exchange, and other evidences of debt. The general power to make personal and commercial loans essentially is unrestricted.

Real Estate Loans and Related Activities

A national bank may make real estate loans pursuant to 12 USC 371 and 12 USC 24(Seventh). A national bank will find the standards for real estate-related lending and associated activities at 12 CFR 34. Real estate lending may be performed for the account of the bank, the operating subsidiary, or for third parties.¹¹ National banks and their operating subsidiaries may make (or participate in), arrange, purchase, or sell loans or extensions of credit (or interests therein) secured by liens or interests in residential or commercial real estate (including acquisition, development, and construction loans) without any special quantitative limit aside from the general lending limit, but subject to applicable restrictions and requirements of the OCC's regulations in 12 CFR 34 and accompanying Interagency Guidelines for Real Estate Lending Policies. They may also perform various activities that are closely related to the lending function, such as gathering census tract information, auditing loan portfolios, preparing loan documentation, performing flood insurance services, and inspecting real property.¹²

The authority to make such loans includes structuring them as “participating loans,” when a portion of the interest, but not the principal, is contingent upon the success of the borrower's enterprise. However, the lender may not take an ownership interest in the underlying real estate.¹³

Certain permissible services (including lending, functions involved in loan brokerage, preparation of loan documentation, performing flood insurance services, inspecting real property, and others) qualify as “settlement services” under the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA). As such, referrals of these services among the bank and its lending affiliates are subject to the restrictions relating to “affiliated business arrangements” (ABAs) as defined in RESPA. For additional information and guidance, refer to \(V\) “Providing real estate settlement, closing, escrow, and related services; and real estate appraisal services for the subsidiary, parent bank, or other financial institutions” of this appendix.

Other Lending-Related Activities

In addition to direct lending activities, national banks and their operating subsidiaries also may engage in lending-related activities on behalf of third parties, that are part of or incidental to banking, such as conducting a general mortgage banking business and providing loan brokerage services. For example, national banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide real estate asset management and advisory services, furnish debt collection services, set fees, offer credit reporting services, arrange for the placement of equity interests in commercial real estate between borrowers and investors,¹⁴ market and sell mortgage loans in the secondary market, provide customer service support for a credit card business, negotiate and close loans for third-party lenders, arrange loan commitments from third parties, act as document custodians of residential mortgage loan documents for third parties, assist state and local governments in placing funds made available through mortgage revenue bonds, and engage in merchant processing activities.¹⁵

Activities undertaken for third parties, such as brokerage or servicing activities, may be conducted at any location without regard to branching restrictions.

Selling money orders, savings bonds, or travelers checks.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries generally may sell these instruments without regard to where the bank's branch offices are or could be located. In addition, the OCC's interpretive ruling, "Sale of money orders at nonbanking outlets," 12 CFR 7.1014, allows bonded agents to sell money orders on behalf of the bank or its operating subsidiary at nonbanking locations. See section (Y) below.

(D) Purchasing, selling, servicing, or warehousing loans or other extensions of credit, or interests therein.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may, subject to safety and soundness considerations, engage in purchasing (including factoring), selling, servicing, or warehousing loans or other extensions of credit for the bank's or subsidiary's account or for the account of others. These activities are permitted for any type of loan, or interest therein, including, among other things, consumer loans, accounts receivable, credit card loans, commercial loans, residential mortgage loans, and commercial real estate loans. Most such loans and activities are subject to the same general authorities and limitations as apply to the origination of loans (see section (C) above).

The OCC interprets the general lending authority of section 24(Seventh) as permitting national banks and their operating subsidiaries to act as agent in selling, warehousing or servicing mortgage and other loans.¹⁶ Warehousing loans generally involves holding loans that are closed and awaiting sale or delivery to an investor. National banks and their operating subsidiaries may engage in mortgage collateral warehousing for third parties, which involves the receipt, verification, and storage of loan documentation for lenders.¹⁷ In addition, they may provide warehousing services to extend credit to the loan originator in exchange for an assignment of the loans.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may transport items pertaining to banking operations between the offices of the bank, the bank and its affiliated financial institutions; the bank and nonaffiliated financial institutions; offices of non-affiliated financial institutions; offices of noncustomers of the bank; and between noncustomers of the bank and their financial institutions.¹⁸ National banks may provide courier services for financial institutions under the following circumstances:

- For the bank itself: transportation of items related solely to the internal operations of the bank.¹⁹ This includes transportation of cash between bank offices or for the restocking of the bank's ATMs.²⁰

- For the bank and affiliated and nonaffiliated financial institutions: transportation of cash and documents related to banking, such as checks, commercial paper, non-negotiable instruments, audit and accounting media, and other business records.²²

A courier service performing the previously mentioned functions pursuant to the after-the-fact notice procedure must not constitute a branch of any bank—that is, the service must not constitute branching transactions (the receipt of deposits, payment of withdrawals, or disbursement of loan proceeds) with its customers. If the service does constitute a branch, branching approval must be sought under the procedures set forth in 12 CFR 5.30.

(F) Providing management consulting, operational advice, and services for other financial institutions.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may gather information and provide advice to any unaffiliated depository institution, in the form of information or opinion about its management and operation, and provide other services tailored to the management and operational needs of a depository institution customer. Banks traditionally have performed those activities in their correspondent relationships, under which they act on behalf of other banks in conducting the banking business. See also subsection (S), infra, “Offering correspondent services to the extent permitted by published OCC precedent.” Operating subsidiaries may provide a broad range of services to other depository institutions under this authority.²³ Services offered pursuant to this authority must be those that reflect and incorporate the unique nature of the banking business.²⁴

Any actions taken or decisions made by a depository institution customer, based on services provided by the operating subsidiary, must be a function of the management or board of directors of the customer, with the operating subsidiary refraining from engaging in a management role or exercising any form of operating control over the customer.²⁵

(G) Providing check guaranty, verification, and payment services.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may agree to “guarantee” or “verify” the checks that will be drawn upon the bank by its customers.²⁶ In essence, the bank or the operating subsidiary agrees with its customers to extend credit, if necessary, to honor the checks. They may also provide check-cashing services to the general public without regard to where the bank’s branch offices are or could be located.

(H) For the bank or its affiliates, providing data processing, data warehousing and data transmission products, services, and related activities and facilities, including associated equipment and technology.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may collect, process, transcribe, analyze, and store banking, financial, and economic data for themselves and their customers as part of the business of banking.²⁷ Permissible processing of eligible data includes provision of data processing services, data transmission services, facilities – including equipment, technology, and personnel – databases, and advice. It also includes providing access to such services, facilities, databases, and advice. Economic data includes anything of value in banking and financial decisions.²⁸

In addition to the processing of banking, financial, or economic data, national banks and their subsidiaries may, as activities incidental to the business of banking, provide limited amounts of non-financial information processing to their customers to enhance marketability or use of a banking service.²⁹ For example, a national bank selling home banking services can also provide customers with access to non-banking services “to increase the customer base for and the usage of” the home banking service.³⁰

Banks and their subsidiaries that engage in financial or non-financial data processing will be expected to comply with all applicable supervisory requirements and guidance.³¹

General Description

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide investment and financial advisory services and financial counseling as part of banking powers authorized under 12 USC 24(Seventh), or, in the case of activities that are fiduciary in nature, pursuant to their fiduciary powers under 12 USC 92a.³²

Advisory activities may be provided to individuals, corporations, institutional investors, correspondent financial institutions, pension and other retirement plans, and others.³³ Those activities include individualized investment advice, business advisory services, financial advice, financial planning, investment recommendations, and analyses of economic trends.³⁴ Various administrative and shareholder functions also are incidental to the provision of advisory services including, but not limited to, recordkeeping, accounting, and other services.³⁵ Operating subsidiaries seeking to engage in different advisory activities should consult other sections of these guidelines, as applicable, for the scope of permissible activities. Any bank with an operating subsidiary engaging in these activities must comply with applicable provisions of the Interagency Statement on Retail Sales of Nondeposit Investment Products, February 15, 1994.

Depending on the advisory services offered, the operating subsidiary may need to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) as an investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (Advisers Act) and comply with any applicable state laws.³⁶ Banks are excluded specifically from the definition of investment adviser under the Advisers Act, unless they advise registered investment companies. Bank operating subsidiaries are fully subject to the Advisers Act.³⁷

Adviser with Investment Discretion

Investment discretion means, with respect to an account, the sole or shared authority (whether or not that authority is exercised) to determine what securities or

A bank that delegates its authority over investments and a bank that receives delegated authority over investments are both deemed to have investment discretion.³⁸ If an operating subsidiary proposes to exercise investment discretion on behalf of customers or provide investment advice for a fee, the national bank must have prior OCC approval to exercise fiduciary powers pursuant to 12 CFR 5.26, unless the subsidiary is required to be registered with the SEC. 12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(vii).

Financial adviser or counselor to governmental entities or instrumentalities, businesses or individuals to governmental entities or instrumentalities

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may advise state, local, and foreign governments on financing projects and assist them in the marketing of their securities. National banks may provide such advice pursuant to their incidental powers.³⁹ to businesses or individuals

Banks may provide financial advice, financial planning, and counseling to businesses and consumers in a variety of contexts,⁴⁰ including advice and counseling on employee benefits and human resources⁴¹ and financial planning.⁴²

Financial planning services generally include collecting and analyzing a customer's financial data; identifying a customer's financial goals and objectives; preparing a comprehensive financial plan consisting of recommendations on how to achieve the identified financial goals and objectives; evaluating personal, banking, financial, and related economic data and implementation of the financial plan, that is, purchasing the relevant products or services.⁴³ A comprehensive financial plan may contain tax planning and financial advice, and may recommend the purchase or sale of specific investments or securities.⁴⁴ A national bank financial planner may also use financial plans to make other recommendations, such as the consolidation of loans and purchase of life insurance.⁴⁵

Advising Registered Investment Companies

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may act as an investment adviser to an investment company as part of banking powers authorized under 12 USC 24(Seventh), or pursuant to their fiduciary powers under 12 USC 92a.⁴⁶ Various administrative and shareholder functions may be provided in connection with the provision of investment advisory services, including, but not limited to, recordkeeping, accounting, and other services.⁴⁷ Further, operating subsidiaries may sponsor, organize, manage, and act as investment advisers to closed-end investment companies.⁴⁸ Banks and their operating subsidiaries advising registered investment companies must comply with the restrictions in sections 23A and 23B of the Federal Reserve Act, 12 USC 371c and 371c-1.⁴⁹

The Investment Company Act of 1940 governs the formation, operation, and registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) of investment companies.⁵⁰ Serving as an investment adviser to an investment company is defined in section 2(a)(20) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 and includes furnishing advice to the investment company on the desirability of investing in, purchasing, or selling securities.⁵¹

Investment advisers to investment companies must register with the SEC under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (Advisers Act), unless an exemption is available.⁵² Banks specifically are excluded from the definition of investment adviser under the Advisers Act, unless they advise registered investment companies. Bank operating subsidiaries are fully subject to the Advisers Act.⁵³ Operating subsidiaries also must comply with any applicable state laws.

Advising Mortgage or Real Estate Investment Trusts

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide investment advice and manage a portfolio of real estate loans and equity investments held or proposed to be held by a mortgage or real estate investment trust. Furnishing real estate asset management and advisory services, including servicing, advice, and recommendations for loan participations and mortgages and for real estate held, falls under the financial and investment advisory authority of banks in 12 USC 24(Seventh), and a national bank may act as an advisory company for a mortgage or real estate investment trust.⁵⁴

Furnishing Economic Information

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide advisory services about financial and investment planning and advice on general economic, business, and financial outlooks, and general trends in the stock and bond markets.⁵⁵

Providing Investment Advice Related to Futures and Options

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may advise customers in transactions involving financial and commodity futures.⁵⁶ Operating subsidiaries also may provide advice on futures and options on futures contracts as an introducing broker (IB) or a commodity-trading advisor (CTA). An operating subsidiary, acting as an IB, is engaged in soliciting or in accepting orders (in more than a clerical capacity) to purchase and sell any commodities futures or options. An IB does not extend credit or accept any money, securities, or property to margin, guarantee, or secure any trades or contracts that result or may result from the solicitation or acceptance of orders. Alternatively, an operating subsidiary, acting as a CTA, advises others, through publications, writings, electronic media, or other direct communication or by the regular issuance of analyses and reports, on the value or advisability of trading in any contract on commodities futures or options on commodities futures.⁵⁷ An operating subsidiary, acting as a futures commission merchant (FCM), also may provide advice in connection with its FCM activities.

Providing Consumer Financial Counseling

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide financial advice to individuals directly or through the use of written materials, computer programs, seminars, or other methods. Providing financial advice includes advising persons on financial matters and marketing by-products of the bank's financial advisory capabilities.⁵⁸

(J) Providing tax planning and preparation services.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may assist customers in tax planning and preparing and filing their tax returns, including by electronic means, either gratuitously or for a reasonable fee.⁵⁹ They are not restricted to serving only their

(K) Providing financial and transactional advice and assistance, including advice and assistance for customers in structuring, arranging, and executing mergers and acquisitions, divestitures, joint ventures, leveraged buyouts, swaps, foreign exchange, derivative transactions, coin and bullion, and capital restructurings.

Structuring, Arranging, and Executing Mergers, Acquisitions, Divestitures, Joint Ventures, Leveraged Buyouts, and Capital Restructurings

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may furnish advice on financing the sale, acquisition, or capitalization of a business and other merchant banking transactions and the related activity of acting as an intermediary to arrange third-party financing through loans or the private placement of debt or equity interests. Acting as agent for a customer in the private placement of the customer's securities is permitted under 12 USC 24(Seventh). In conducting private placement activity, the subsidiary must comply with applicable securities laws.⁶⁴ See Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act, P.L. 106-102, Section 201 (Nov. 12, 1999) (amending, effective May 2001, the brokerage exemption in 15 USC 78c(a)(4) by limiting permissible private placement activities).

Executing Swaps, Foreign Exchange, Derivative Transactions, Coin and Bullion

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may advise, structure, arrange, and execute transactions, as agent or principal, in connection with interest rate, basis rate, currency, currency coupon, and cash-settled commodity, commodity price index, equity and equity index swaps, and other related derivative products, such as caps, collars, floors, swaptions, forward rate agreements, and other similar products commonly known as derivatives. National banks may originate, trade, and make markets in these products. National banks may arrange matched swaps or enter into unmatched swaps on an individual or portfolio basis and may offset unmatched positions with exchange-traded futures and options contracts or over-the-counter cash-settled options. National banks may provide financial advice and counseling for these activities under 12 USC 24(Seventh).⁶⁵

National banks and their operating subsidiaries are expressly authorized to engage in the business of “buying and selling exchange, coin, and bullion.” Pursuant to this authority, a national bank and its operating subsidiary may buy and sell gold, silver, platinum, palladium, copper, coins, and bullion.⁶⁶ The express power to buy and sell exchange, coin, and bullion encompasses transactions for the account of the operating subsidiary and its parent bank. Operating subsidiaries are also authorized to buy and sell foreign currency, because it is a form of exchange.⁶⁷

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide customer advice and structure, arrange, and execute financial transactions involving foreign exchange, coin, and bullion for its own account and for the account of customers. An operating subsidiary may become a member of an exchange and act as specialist, market-maker, floor trader, and broker-dealer of exchange-traded options on foreign exchange, coin, and bullion to execute trades for its own account and that of affiliated and unaffiliated customers. An operating subsidiary may obtain clearing membership to clear such trades for its own account, for the parent bank, and for customers. Operating subsidiaries may also engage in over-the-counter (OTC) trading in the cash and spot markets, and in forwards, futures, swaps, and options contracts on foreign exchange, coin, and bullion. Operating subsidiaries of national banks may maintain partnership interests in partnerships that engage in foreign currency options and futures transactions provided that the parent bank notifies the OCC of any change in the potential liability arising from the partnership's exchange registrations and memberships.⁶⁸

National bank operating subsidiaries that join exchanges and clearinghouses in order to engage in foreign exchange, coin and bullion, and derivatives activities may file a notice to engage in these activities if they can comply with certain restrictions.⁶⁹ Specifically, a national bank's operating subsidiary may not join any exchange or clearing association that requires the bank or any other of its subsidiaries to guarantee or otherwise become liable for trades executed or cleared by the operating subsidiary other than those trades executed or cleared on behalf of the bank and any of its affiliates or other operating subsidiaries. Moreover, a national bank's operating subsidiary may not become a clearing member of any exchange or clearing association that requires the bank also to become a member of that exchange or clearing association, unless the bank obtains a waiver of that requirement. Finally, a national bank may not guarantee or assume responsibility for any liability of its operating subsidiary other than those trades executed or cleared on behalf of the bank and any of its affiliates or other operating subsidiaries.

A national bank may file a notice only if its loans to, and investments in, its operating subsidiary (and its partnership interests) in the aggregate do not exceed its legal lending limit at the time of the loan or investment. A national bank may not make investments of equity capital in its operating subsidiary or its partnership interest) that exceed the lending limit without the OCC's prior written consent. To calculate the lending limit according to this limitation, a national bank's investment in its operating subsidiary is deemed unsecured. A national bank may, however, lend its operating subsidiary (and its partnership interest) in the aggregate an additional 10 percent of its unimpaired capital and surplus, if secured by readily marketable collateral as provided in 12 USC 84.

Arranging Commercial Real Estate Equity Financing

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may act as an intermediary to arrange for the placement of equity interests in commercial or investment real estate, generally on behalf of owners and developers, to finance the development of the property under the lending and financing authority of national banks in 12 USC 371 and 24(Seventh) and their authority to arrange for private placements of all types of investments pursuant to the incidental powers of a national bank to carry on the business of banking granted in 12 USC 24(Seventh).⁷⁰

Neither the operating subsidiary nor any affiliate should expect to acquire an equity interest in any project financed by the private placement or to have a role in the development, management, or syndication of the project. The fee received by the subsidiary may not be based on the profits earned from the project. The subsidiary may not intend to become a general real estate broker, nor will it list or advertise properties for sale. The subsidiary should deal solely with sophisticated institutional investors. If the subsidiary or the parent bank engages in any lending for this activity, it should be limited to traditional debt financing, but may include taking interests as permitted by 12 CFR 7.1006.

(L) Underwriting and reinsuring credit related insurance to the extent permitted under section 302 of the GLBA (15 USC 6712).

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may continue to underwrite and reinsure any credit related insurance products being provided by national banks as of 1/1/99 or that were authorized in writing by the OCC as of that date.⁷¹

Credit-related insurance products guarantee or secure payment of an outstanding obligation in a credit transaction in the event that the borrower is unable to pay. Credit-related insurance products often are sold in conjunction with installment loans, automobile loans, credit cards, and residential mortgages. There are various types of credit-related products, including credit life insurance, credit disability insurance (also known as credit accident and health insurance), and mortgage life and disability insurance.⁷² For example, a credit life insurance product on a relatively small decreasing balance installment loan typically will pay off the balance due on the loan if the borrower should die before the loan is repaid. Similarly, if an insured debtor becomes disabled or is killed accidentally, a credit accident and health insurance product policy may pay the policy premiums during the period of disability or pay off the loan or both. The precise terms of credit-related insurance products may vary based on the terms and conditions of a particular loan.⁷³

Credit-related insurance products provide benefits for both the borrower and the lender by easing the financial burden on each in the event of unforeseen circumstances, such as death, disability, or unemployment. Credit-related insurance exists as a unique kind of insurance product that is an integral part of certain credit transactions. Hence, underwriting credit-related insurance products serves as a risk management tool linked to the credit function of lending institutions.

The OCC has established the authority of national banks and their subsidiaries to sell as agent and underwrite credit-related insurance products as part of, or incidental to, the business of banking through a long line of precedents.⁷⁴ The OCC has concluded that national banks and their subsidiaries may underwrite credit-related insurance products in connection with loans by the bank itself and by lenders other than the bank.⁷⁵

Prior to January 1, 1999, the OCC had “determined in writing” that national banks and their subsidiaries may provide credit-related insurance products as principal in connection with loans made by a financial institution lender other than the bank itself.⁷⁶

(M) Leasing of personal property and acting as an agent or adviser in leases for others.

This activity includes:

- Leases in which the bank may invest pursuant to 12 USC 24(Seventh).
- Leases in which the bank may invest pursuant to 12 USC 24(Tenth).

⁷² See 12 CFR 2.2(b).

⁷³ Certain other insurance arrangements could also be considered “credit-related” when the existence of the insurance is integral to the borrower’s ability to repay a loan in the event specified events occur.

⁷⁴ See, for example, Corporate Decision No. 98-28 (May 11, 1998); Corporate Decision No. 97-92 (Oct. 17, 1997); Interpretive Letter No. 283 (March 16, 1984), reprinted in [1983-1984 Transfer Binder] Fed. ⁷⁵ Corporate Decision No. 97-92 (Oct. 17, 1997).

⁷⁶ Prior to January 1, 1999, the OCC had also determined in writing that national banks and their subsidiaries may provide as principal other insurance products, including safe deposit box liability insurance and self insurance of business risks. See Corporate Decision No. 97-92 (October 17, 1997); Interpretive letter No. 845 (October 20, 1998), reprinted in [1998-1999 Transfer Binder Fed. Banking L. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 81-300. However underwriting and reinsuring credit-related insurance are the only insurance underwriting activities that qualify for the notice procedures under 12 CFR 5.34(e)(5)(v)(L).

- Acting as agent, broker, or adviser in leases for others. The notice process for any leasing activity under this paragraph is not available, however, if the notice involves the direct or indirect acquisition by the bank of any low-quality asset from an affiliate in connection with a transaction subject to this section. For purposes of this paragraph (M), the terms “low-quality asset” and “affiliate” have the same meaning as provided in section 23A of the Federal Reserve Act, 12 USC 371c.

Pursuant to 12 USC 24(Seventh) and 24(Tenth), national banks and their operating subsidiaries may act as lessors and engage in the financing of full-payout, net leases for personal property, subject to the requirements of 12 CFR 23. Section 24(Seventh) leases have long been permitted on the ground that they are the functional equivalent of loans. Section 24(Seventh) leases are authorized for both tangible and intangible personal property and are subject to specific restrictions set forth in Subparts A and C of 12 CFR 23, including a limitation on reliance of residual value. Part 23 requires national banks and their subsidiaries to receive prior OCC approval for certain activities and should be consulted to determine whether a separate filing under that part is needed.

Section 24(Tenth) leases are authorized pursuant to express statutory authority and are subject to specific restrictions set forth in Subparts A and B of 12 CFR 23, including a 10 percent-of-assets limitation on the aggregate book value of section 24(Tenth) leases and a minimum lease term of 90 days. In addition, the authority conferred by section 24(Tenth) is limited to the leasing of tangible personal property. Tangible personal property includes such items as vehicles, manufactured homes, machinery, equipment, and furniture. Unlike section 24(Seventh) leases, section 24(Tenth) leases are not viewed as a form of lending. Whether property is considered “personal” property depends on state law. Both types of leases are also subject to lending limits and affiliate-transactions restrictions.

National banks and their subsidiaries generally have not been authorized to engage in the lease financing of real property,⁷⁷ but may do so when the real estate lease is incidental to a personal property leasing transaction.⁷⁸ They may, however, engage in the “placement of real estate lease transactions, specifically, locating investors as potential lessors to a potential lessee and brokering the debt portion of any such lease.”⁷⁹

To establish a leasing relationship with a lessee, banks and subsidiaries may acquire property to be leased by purchasing specific property based on a legally binding commitment to lease or a legally binding written agreement, indemnifying the bank against loss from the acquisition of the leased property. Banks and their subsidiaries may also acquire property to be leased in the absence of a commitment to lease or indemnification agreement if the bank satisfies certain conditions (set forth in 12 CFR 23.4), demonstrating that the acquisition of property is not speculative. Finally, banks may acquire leases by purchasing them from another lessor, but in the case of section 24(Seventh) leases, the residual value requirement must be met at the time of the lease purchase(s). Thus, if a bank or its subsidiary purchases an existing section 24(Seventh) lease, that lease must be a “conforming lease” (as defined in 12 CFR 23) at the time of its acquisition.

Banks and their subsidiaries may also provide certain lease-related services to third parties to the extent that they are incidental to the business of banking. National banks are expressly authorized to act as finder or similar agent or broker.⁸⁰ In addition, the OCC has opined that national banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide lease consulting services (including financial advice); management, brokerage, and finder services; and lease servicing for third parties.⁸¹

A special category of leasing activities is permitted by 12 CFR 7.3300. National banks and their operating subsidiaries may purchase or construct municipal buildings, such as schools or similar public facilities, for lease to a municipality or other public authority.⁸²

Upon expiration of the lease, the lessee must become the owner of the building or facility. The bank lessor must be repaid entirely by the payments from the lessee.

(N) Providing securities brokerage or acting as a futures commission merchant, and providing related credit and other related services.

Providing securities brokerage

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide brokerage services, related securities credit, advisory services, and administrative services as part of or incidental to the business of banking. The specific language of 12 USC 24(Seventh) recognizes that banks may purchase and sell “securities and stock without recourse, solely upon the order, and for the account of, customers, and in no case for its own account.”

Securities brokerage services involve the buying and selling of a wide variety of financial investment products as agent upon the order and for the account of customers. Such investment products include annuities, shares of mutual funds, units in unit investment trusts, equity and fixed income securities, sold on an agency basis. In addition, an integral part of the brokerage business is advertising and marketing services and products to attract customers.⁸³

Brokerage services include buying and selling securities in the secondary market as “riskless principal.” A riskless principal transaction involves the operating subsidiary purchasing or selling a security upon the order of a customer, while conducting a simultaneous offsetting sale or purchase of a security upon the order of another customer.⁸⁴ Operating subsidiaries also may act as agent for a customer in the private placement of the customer's securities as described more fully under Section K of the notice procedures, supra.

Related securities credit offered by an operating subsidiary as part of its securities brokerage services involves the extension or maintenance of credit to customers for the purchase or carrying of securities. This activity must be consistent with 12 USC 36 and 12 CFR 7.1004.⁸⁵ The Federal Reserve Board's regulations on margin loans are applicable to banks under Regulation U⁸⁶ and to brokers under Regulation T.⁸⁷

Operating subsidiaries providing securities brokerage services may furnish other related activities, including investment advisory and administrative services. Various administrative and shareholder functions are incidental to the provision of the brokerage services, including but, not limited to, recordkeeping, accounting, and other services.⁸⁸

Operating subsidiaries established to engage in these activities may conduct them in a partnership structure. For example, a subsidiary of a national bank may enter into a general partnership arrangement or joint venture with one or more subsidiaries or affiliates of an investment bank, provided that certain conditions relating to partnership issues are met.⁸⁹

Banks with operating subsidiaries that engage in these activities must comply with applicable provisions of the Interagency Statement on Retail Sales of Nondeposit Investment Products, February 15, 1994, and 12 CFR Part 14. Banks and their operating subsidiaries advising registered investment companies must comply with the restrictions in sections 23A and 23B and Regulation W.

Acting as futures commission merchant.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may act as futures commission merchants (FCM). A FCM operating subsidiary typically solicits or accepts orders to purchase or sell financial or agricultural futures contracts and options on such contracts on major exchanges. An FCM may extend credit or accept any money, securities, or property, to margin, guarantee, or secure any trades or contracts, resulting from the solicitation or acceptance of orders.⁹⁰ An FCM may act as

⁹⁰ "Financial futures" include those futures contracts and options on futures contracts relating to assets that a national bank may purchase for its own account; that is, United States securities and intermediary between a customer and exchange members that actually execute or clear trades. Alternatively, an FCM may be a member of an exchange and serve as a clearing member. Operating subsidiaries may also offer advisory services, including financial and market analysis, strategy development, research, and discretionary funds management in connection with its FCM activities.⁹¹

National bank operating subsidiaries that join futures exchanges and clearinghouses may file a notice to engage in these activities if they can comply with certain restrictions.⁹² A national bank's FCM may not join any exchange or clearing association that requires the bank or any other of its subsidiaries to guarantee or otherwise become liable for trades executed or cleared by the FCM other than those trades executed or cleared by the bank and any of its affiliates or other operating subsidiaries. Moreover, a national bank's FCM may not become a clearing member of any exchange or clearing association that requires the bank to also become a member of that exchange or clearing association, unless the bank obtains a waiver of that requirement. Finally, a national bank may not guarantee or assume responsibility for any liability of its FCM other than those trades executed and/or cleared for and on behalf of the bank and any of its affiliates or other operating subsidiaries.

A national bank establishing an operating subsidiary to engage in the activities described in this section may file a notice, only if its loans to, and investments in, its FCM (and its partnership interests) in the aggregate do not exceed its legal lending limit at the time of the loan or investment. A national bank may not make investments of equity capital in its FCM (or its partnership interest) that exceed the lending limit without the OCC's prior written consent. To calculate the lending limit according to this limitation, a national bank's investment in its FCM is deemed unsecured. A national bank may, however, lend its FCM (and its partnership interest) in the aggregate an additional 10 percent of its unimpaired capital and surplus, if secured by readily marketable collateral as provided in 12 USC 84.

(O) Underwriting and dealing, including making a market, in bank permissible securities and purchasing and selling as principal, asset backed obligations.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may underwrite and deal in Type I and Type II securities.⁹³

Specifically, they may underwrite and deal in Type I securities, which include: (1) obligations of the United States, a department or agency of the United States, general obligations of states and their political subdivisions; (2) obligations of certain quasi-governmental corporations, such as the Federal National Mortgage Association and the Government National Mortgage Association; (3) other obligations (such as qualified Canadian government obligations) specifically listed in 12 USC 24(Seventh); and (4) other securities the OCC determines to be eligible Type I securities under 12 USC 24(Seventh). National banks may underwrite and

United States government agency securities; domestic and Eurodollar money market instruments; bank certificates of deposit, foreign currencies; and gold, silver, platinum and palladium. "Commodity futures" include futures contracts and options on futures contracts for all other financial equities and non-financial (agricultural, petroleum, and metals) assets.

deal in such obligations without limitation, subject to safety and soundness considerations.⁹⁴ A well-capitalized national bank may underwrite and deal in municipal revenue bonds without limit.⁹⁵

National banks and their operating subsidiaries also may underwrite and deal in Type II securities, which include: (1) obligations of certain international and multilateral development banks, such as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank); (2) obligations issued by any state or political subdivision for housing, university, or dormitory purposes; (3) other obligations listed specifically in 12 USC 24(Seventh); and (4) other securities the OCC determines to be eligible as Type II securities, subject to a limitation that the obligations of any single issuer may not exceed 10 percent of the bank's capital and surplus.⁹⁶ A national bank's ability to hold Type II securities is subject to a limitation that the obligations of any single issuer may not exceed 10 percent of the bank's capital and surplus.⁹⁷

National banks and their operating subsidiary may securitize and sell assets that they hold as part of their banking business. The amount of securitized loans and obligations that may be sold is not limited to a specific percentage of the bank's capital and surplus.⁹⁸

The operating subsidiary must provide the OCC with evidence that it has developed suitable policies and internal controls to ensure the safe and sound conduct of the proposed activity. The operating subsidiary also should coordinate its trading positions with those of the bank itself.⁹⁹

(P) Acting as an insurance agent or broker, including title insurance to the extent permitted under section 303 of the GLBA (15 USC 6713).

Sales Pursuant to Section 92

National banks generally may sell insurance pursuant to section 92 in the same nationwide market as is generally available to licensed insurance agencies in the state where the bank agency operates.¹⁰⁰ National banks may sell insurance to customers wherever the customers are located.¹⁰¹ National banks may sell insurance directly or through an operating subsidiary if the national bank is located and doing business in a place of 5,000 or less in population.¹⁰² Any area designated by the Census Bureau as a place is a place for purposes of section 92.¹⁰³ National banks and their subsidiaries with insurance agencies may rely on OCC opinions to establish satellite offices outside the place of 5,000 (including satellite offices in states outside the state where the insurance business is located) to solicit and sell insurance in the same manner generally permissible for state insurance agencies.¹⁰⁴ National trust companies may sell insurance from a trust office that is located in a place of 5,000 if the office performs core fiduciary functions (accepting fiduciary appointments, executing trust documents, and making decisions regarding the investment and distribution of fiduciary assets).¹⁰⁵

Sales of Credit-related Insurance as Agent under 12 USC 24(Seventh)

National banks and their subsidiaries may engage in various credit-related insurance agency activities under 12 USC 24(Seventh). This law authorizes national banks to engage in the “business of banking,” and to exercise “all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of banking.” Although an insurance product sold under this authority could also be sold under 12 USC 92, there are no geographic “place of 5,000” limits under 12 USC 24 (Seventh).

Pursuant to 12 USC 24(Seventh), national banks and their subsidiaries may sell credit-related insurance products, including:

- Credit life insurance (as defined in 12 CFR 2.2(b));¹⁰⁶
- Involuntary unemployment insurance (protects the bank if the borrower becomes involuntarily unemployed);¹⁰⁷
- *Vendors single interest insurance*¹⁰⁸ and *vendors double interest insurance*¹⁰⁹ (insures the bank or the bank and the borrower, respectively, against loss or damage to personal property pledged as loan collateral);
- Mechanical breakdown insurance (protects a loan customer against most major mechanical failures of collateral securing a loan during the loan’s life);¹¹⁰ and,
- Vehicle service contracts (protects the value of loan collateral from mechanical breakdown for the term of the contract).¹¹¹

Title Insurance

A national bank may not underwrite or sell title insurance unless the national bank falls within an exception:

(1) National banks and their subsidiaries may sell title insurance as agents in a state to the same extent as permitted for state banks;¹¹² or,

(2) A national bank and its subsidiaries may continue to conduct title insurance activities, including underwriting, in which the national bank or subsidiary were lawfully engaged before November 12, 1999, subject to some exceptions if affiliates are providing insurance as principal.¹¹³

However, if a state law in effect before November 12, 1999 prohibits all persons in a state from selling or underwriting title insurance, a national bank may not sell title insurance.

(Q) Reinsuring mortgage insurance on loans originated, purchased, or serviced by the bank, its subsidiaries, or its affiliates, provided that if the subsidiary enters into a quota share agreement, the subsidiary assumes less than 50 percent of the aggregate insured risk covered by the quota share agreement. A "quota share agreement" is an agreement under which the reinsurer is liable to the primary insurance underwriter for an agreed upon percentage of every claim arising out of the covered book of business ceded by the primary insurance underwriter to the reinsurer.

National banks may reinsure mortgage insurance on loans originated, purchased, or serviced by the bank, its subsidiaries, or its affiliates.¹¹⁴ Mortgage insurance protects an investor holding a mortgage loan against default by the mortgagor.

Under an "excess loss" arrangement, the primary insurer pays, and is solely responsible for, claims arising out of a given book of business up to a predetermined percentage, after which the reinsurer is obligated to reimburse the primary insurer's claims up to another predetermined percentage. Thereafter, the primary insurer is solely responsible for claims in excess of the reinsurer's tier of losses on a given book. A "quota share agreement" is an agreement under which the reinsurer is liable to the primary insurance underwriter for an agreed upon percentage of every claim arising out of the covered book of business ceded by the primary insurance underwriter to the reinsurer. Quota share arrangements have involved the assumption of less than 50 percent of the aggregate insured risk covered by the quota share agreement.

A national bank's captive mortgage reinsurance subsidiary may enter a mortgage reinsurance agreement with a Cayman Island segregated portfolio company to reinsure private mortgage insurance on loans originated or purchased by the bank

(R) Acting as a finder pursuant to 12 CFR 7.1002 to the extent permitted by published OCC precedent.

General

The OCC has long recognized the finder function as a permissible banking activity that includes identifying potential parties, making inquiries as to interest, introducing or arranging contacts or meetings between interested parties, acting as an intermediary between interested parties, and bringing the parties together for transactions that the parties themselves negotiate and consummate.¹¹⁷ As a finder, national banks and their operating subsidiaries may convey information about available products or services to potential markets for them,¹¹⁸ arrange for third-party providers to offer reduced rates to those customers referred by the bank,¹¹⁹ communicate to the seller an offer to purchase or a request for information,¹²⁰ provide certain administrative, clerical, and recordkeeping functions,¹²¹ supply financial information to one party about the other, and act as a conduit in conveying information from one party to another.¹²²

Acting as a Web Site Host

The OCC has determined that Web site hosting is a form of finder activity. A national bank may establish, register, and host the commercially enabled Web site in the name of the retailer.¹²³ The bank may store the data representing the retailer's online catalog and provide periodic reports to the retailer of site-related activities.¹²⁴ The bank may also provide associated payments and deposit services resulting from Web-based transactions.¹²⁵ A national bank also may host a Web site for a government agency, where the site will allow the public, consumers, and other agencies to access or purchase services, information forums, and products from the agency.¹²⁶

A national bank, in the exercise of the finder authority, may establish hyperlinks between its home page and the Internet home pages of third-party providers so that bank customers will be able to access those nonbank Web sites from the bank site.¹²⁷ The OCC also has permitted national banks, as a form of finder activity, to operate a “virtual mall.” A virtual mall provides a collection of links to Web sites of third-party vendors. The collection of links, organized by product type and made available to bank customers, enables the customers to shop for a range of financial and nonfinancial products and services via the links.¹²⁸

In addition, the OCC has determined that, as a finder, a national bank may establish an Internet site that will function as an electronic central facility enabling businesses to negotiate and organize among themselves aggregate buying, selling, or financing efforts, and for other collaborative efforts.¹²⁹

Incidental to its offering of commercially engaged Web site hosting, a national bank may provide Web design services to its merchant customers.¹³⁰

Acting as Finder for Insurance

National banks may provide finder services in connection with insurance products and services. To identify permissible national bank finder arrangements in the insurance context (as an alternative to section 92 authority), the OCC considers: (1) the scope of the proposed activities; (2) the existence or absence of another insurance agent or broker in the arrangement; (3) whether the bank has a contractual relationship with an insurance company for selling its products, and if so, the nature of the relationship; and (4) the bank’s compensation arrangement for the proposed activities. For example, national banks may participate in sharing arrangements with other banks whereby they combine their efforts to use the services of a group of independent agencies that would solicit and sell insurance services to bank customers on site, sharing pro rata in referred business.¹³¹

Acting as Finder for Investment Advisory Services

National banks may act as finder by referring bank customers to investment advisors.¹³²

Acting as a Finder for Marketing of Trust Services

National and state banks as well as other individuals and institutions, including registered investment advisors, savings associations, savings banks, credit unions, financial planners, benefit consultants, independent insurance agents and brokers, certified public accountants, and attorneys may refer trust business to a national bank pursuant to written agreements.¹³³

(S) Offering correspondent services to the extent permitted by published OCC precedent.

National banks have traditionally performed for their affiliates and other financial institutions an array of activities called “correspondent services.” The OCC has long permitted national banks and their operating subsidiaries to offer these correspondent services as part of the business of banking.¹³⁴ A national bank may perform as a correspondent service for its affiliates and other financial institutions any service it may perform for itself.¹³⁵ Examples of correspondent services include providing: computer networking packages and related hardware; data processing services and the sale of software that performs data processing functions; document control and recordkeeping; financial and consulting services; flood hazard determinations; security consulting services; loan collection and repossession services; and vault cash.¹³⁶

(T) Acting as agent or broker in the sale of fixed or variable annuities.

National banks may sell fixed and variable annuities without regard to the place of 5,000 restriction in 12 USC 92 on the sale of insurance products.¹³⁷

(U) Offering debt cancellation or debt suspension agreements.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries are authorized to enter into debt cancellation agreements under which a bank agrees to cancel all or part of a customer’s obligation to repay an extension of credit from that bank upon the occurrence of a specified event under the standards set forth in OCC’s regulations.¹³⁸ Under those regulations, a national bank and its operating subsidiaries also are authorized to enter into debt suspension agreements under which a bank agrees to suspend all or part of a customer’s obligation to repay an extension of credit from that bank upon the occurrence of a specified event. The agreement may be separate from or part of other loan documents. Debt suspension agreements do not include loan payment deferral arrangements in which the triggering event is the borrower’s unilateral election to defer repayment or the bank’s unilateral decision to allow a deferral of repayment.¹³⁹

(V) Providing real estate settlement, closing, escrow, and related services; and real estate appraisal services for the subsidiary, parent bank, or other financial institutions.

Closing, escrow and related services

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may conduct loan closing, settlement and escrow services for themselves and for other lenders.¹⁴⁰ Such services may include receipt and assembly of real estate settlement and loan documents, obtaining signatures for such documents, receipt as escrow agent of loan funds, payoff of prior mortgages and liens, payment of prorated taxes and utility bills, disbursement of net loan proceeds to the seller, and recording of mortgage deeds and other documents.

Closing and escrow services for loans made by the bank and its subsidiaries should be conducted in accordance with OCC rules regarding the origination and making of loans at banking and other than banking offices.¹⁴¹ In particular, where services include the disbursement of loan proceeds, closings should occur either at a main or branch office of the bank or at the office of an unaffiliated entity, such as a lawyer's office or other location, that is not owned by the bank or any of its affiliates.

Appraisal and evaluation services

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may offer appraisal and evaluation services. These services may be performed for the subsidiary, parent bank, or other financial institutions.¹⁴³ Federally regulated institutions must obtain appraisals prepared by a certified or licensed appraiser in connection with federally related transactions. A federally related transaction is any real estate-related financial transaction made on or after August 9, 1990 by a regulated institution that requires the services of an appraiser.

Title 12 CFR 34, Subpart C sets forth the occasions upon which appraisals are required and the standards that appraisals must meet. Certain real estate-related financial transactions are exempt from the requirements of 12 CFR 34 but require an evaluation to be prepared in accordance with the Interagency Appraisal and Evaluation Guidelines.¹⁴⁴ Banks and operating subsidiaries should consult the guidelines for specific information about the regulatory standards for appraisals and evaluations. If appraisal or evaluation services are offered to other financial institutions, the proper controls must be in place to ensure confidentiality.

Affiliated business arrangements (ABAs) and compliance with RESPA

Some permissible services qualify as "settlement services" under the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA), which prohibits persons from giving or receiving any fee or other compensation for the referral of real estate settlement services. RESPA, however, permits persons or entities to invest in settlement service providers and share in the income of those providers in proportion to their ownership interest in the provider, in addition to receiving bona fide compensation for goods and services rendered by the investor. These providers are referred to as ABAs and include operating subsidiaries that provide such services. Banks and these subsidiaries should ensure compliance with the requirements of RESPA. No lender may require a consumer to purchase settlement services from a particular provider as a condition of obtaining a loan, unless expressly authorized by RESPA; the party making the referral must make certain disclosures, and the compensation restrictions must be followed.

In addition, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has issued guidelines for determining whether an ABA is a "bona fide" provider of settlement services and thus is not a sham or shell entity organized to circumvent RESPA's restrictions on payment of fees or other compensation for the referral of real estate settlement services business. These guidelines list a variety of factors that are to be taken into account in determining whether an ABA is bona fide, though conformance to the guidelines does not necessarily require conformance to each of the factors. The factors include, among others: the adequacy of the entity's initial capital and net worth; whether the entity is staffed by its own employees; whether the entity manages its own business affairs; whether it has its own office separate from an office of one of its parents or, if not, whether it pays a general market value rent for the facility; whether it provides substantial services and incurs the risks and rewards of any comparable enterprise, or whether it contracts work out; whether it competes in the market place for business; and whether it sends business exclusively to one of the settlement service providers that created it, or to a number of entities. A full discussion and explanation of these guidelines is in the Department of Housing and Urban Development's RESPA Statement of Policy 1996-2 Regarding Sham Controlled Business Arrangements, 61 Federal Register 29258 (June 7, 1996). See also OCC Bulletin 2005-27.

(W) Acting as a transfer or fiscal agent.

National banks may act as transfer agents. A transfer agent acts on behalf of an issuer of securities or on behalf of itself as an issuer of securities and performs the following functions: (1) countersigning securities upon issuance, (2) monitoring the issuance of securities to prevent unauthorized issuance, (3) registering the transfer of securities, (4) exchanging or converting securities, and/or (5) transferring record ownership of securities by bookkeeping entry without physical issuance of securities certificates. A national bank or national bank subsidiary must register with the OCC if it performs transfer agent functions for any security registered under Section 12 of the Exchange Act or any security that would be required to be registered, except for the exemption for registered investment company exemption and certain insurance company securities.¹⁴⁵ National banks without trust powers may perform transfer agent functions only for their own securities or for securities of affiliates.¹⁴⁶

National banks may act as fiscal agents as the collection and remittance of funds are part of the business of banking.¹⁴⁷

(X) Acting as a digital certification authority to the extent permitted by published OCC precedent, subject to the terms and conditions contained in that precedent.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may act as a digital certification authority, issuing digital certificates and acting as a repository of public keys and certificate information.¹⁴⁸ In addition, they may hold in escrow keys that are used for encryption.¹⁴⁹ Such certification and escrow activities do not require trust powers under 12 USC 92a. National banks and their operating subsidiaries engaging in these activities may also provide connected data processing services and may sell or rent equipment, including specialized, limited purpose software and hardware to be used in connection with the certification authority and repository services and other digital signature or data security systems. They may also provide and sell software generating public/private key pairs for subscribers and software enabling subscribers to create or receive messages with digital signatures, verify digital signatures with public keys, and confirm that the messages were properly signed. They may also provide consulting or advisory services to help customers, including other banks, to implement digital signature systems.

National banks and their subsidiaries also may establish and operate a system for participant organizations to use in order to create and issue digital certificates, acting as the root certification authority (CA) of such a system. In addition to acting as the root CA, the national bank or operating subsidiary may establish business rules so that a customer of the participant organizations can quickly and easily obtain verification of a certificate issued by another CA in the system.¹⁵⁰

Certification authority activities must be undertaken in conformity with OCC precedent¹⁵¹ and OCC guidance as issued from time to time.¹⁵²

(Y) Providing or selling public transportation tickets, event and attraction tickets, gift certificates, prepaid phone cards, promotional and advertising material, postage stamps, and Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) script, and similar media, to the extent permitted by published OCC precedent, subject to the terms and conditions contained in that precedent.

National banks and their operating subsidiaries may provide or sell a variety of “alternate media,” including public transportation tickets or passes, event and attraction tickets, merchant gift certificates, prepaid telephone cards, and EBT script.¹⁵³ Because they have also long been permitted to provide or sell through

Appendix B: Noncontrolling Investment Guidelines

Introduction

National banks and their operating subsidiaries are permitted to make a noncontrolling investment, or hold a minority interest, in certain enterprises. The OCC regulation provides for an after-the-fact notice process if the enterprise is engaged in an activity permissible for after-the-fact notice under the OCC's operating subsidiary regulation or if the activity is substantively the same as that contained in published OCC precedent on noncontrolling investments.¹⁶¹

The following is a summary of noncontrolling investments or minority interests approved by published OCC precedent.¹⁶²

Noncontrolling Investment Activities

Lending

- Appraisal Services. Providing appraisals of the value of collateral before creditors make a mortgage loan.¹⁶³
- Automobile Loans. Providing automobile loans. Loan customers are persons who purchase cars over the Internet from other, nonbank investors in the LLC.¹⁶⁴
- Commercial Real Estate Loans. Originating and selling commercial real estate loans.¹⁶⁵
- Credit Card Banking. Making, purchasing, selling, servicing, or warehousing credit card accounts.¹⁶⁶
- Credit Reporting. Engaging in credit reporting activities, including operation of a credit-reporting bureau.¹⁶⁷
- Credit Reporting Services. Providing credit reporting services in connection with the origination of loans.¹⁶⁸
- Data Processing Mortgage Rights. Providing data processing services that facilitate the transfer of mortgage servicing rights, mortgage ownership, and the release of mortgage rights through an electronic “book-entry” system to register and track mortgage rights.¹⁶⁹

- Escrow Services. Engaging in escrow services.¹⁷⁰
- Home Equity Lines of Credit (Loans for Personal, Family, or Household Purposes (for example Consumer Loans)). Lending to customers through home equity lines of credit, such as home improvement loans secured by second liens on family homes.¹⁷¹
- Loan-Closing Services.
 - Conducting loan-closing services for both themselves and for other lenders. Loan closing services may include the disbursement of loan proceeds.¹⁷²
 - Conducting loan-closing services as an affiliated business arrangement (ABA) as defined by, and in accordance with, the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act.¹⁷³
- Loan Document Preparation. Preparing loan documents that describe the rights and duties of the creditor and the borrower.¹⁷⁴
- Loan Origination and Servicing Activities.
 - Engaging in loan origination and servicing activities, as well as commercial mortgage loan brokerage services.¹⁷⁵
 - Engaging in loan origination and servicing activities that qualify the bank to receive a share of the New Markets Tax Credits awarded the entity in which the bank is investing.¹⁷⁶
- Loans Secured by Residential Real Estate. Originating and selling residential real estate mortgage loans.¹⁷⁷
- Mortgage Banking Activities. Buying, selling, and otherwise dealing in mortgages.¹⁷⁸

Glossary

An adequately capitalized bank means the capital level is as described in 12 CFR 6.4(b)(2).

A bank service company is a corporation, a limited liability company (LLC), or similar entity organized to provide services authorized by the Bank Service Company Act, 12 USC 1861 through 1867, all of whose capital stock is owned by one or more insured banks in the case of a corporation, or all of the members of which are one or more insured banks in the case of an LLC.

A depository institution is any bank or savings association. For bank service company purposes, a depository institution is defined as an insured bank, a financial institution subject to examination by the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) or the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) Board, or a financial institution whose accounts or deposits are insured or guaranteed under state law and eligible to be insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or the NCUA Board.

A depository institution affiliate, for purposes of investing in a financial subsidiary, is any bank or savings association that qualifies as an affiliate under Section 2 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 12 USC 1841.

Eligible debt means unsecured long-term debt that is:

- Not supported by any form of credit enhancement, including a guaranty or standby letter of credit; and
- Not held in whole or in any significant part by any affiliate, officer, director, principal shareholder, or employee of the bank or any other person acting on behalf of or with funds from the bank or an affiliate of the bank.

A financial subsidiary is a corporation, LLC, or similar entity, controlled by one or more insured depository institutions, conducting activities that are financial in nature or incidental to financial activities. Financial subsidiaries do not include operating subsidiaries, bank service companies, or statutory subsidiaries.

Investing in a bank service company includes making any advance of funds to a bank service company, whether by the purchase of stock, the making of a loan, or otherwise, except a payment for rent earned, goods sold and delivered, or services rendered before the payment was made.

A limited liability company (LLC) or a similar entity is an unincorporated business entity organized under state law, providing its members limited liability. It does not include a limited partnership.

Long-term debt for a financial subsidiary means any debt obligation with an initial maturity of 360 days or more.

An operating subsidiary is a separate corporation, LLC, or similar entity, in which a national bank maintains more than a 50 percent voting or similar type of controlling interest, or otherwise controls the subsidiary and no other party controls more than 50 percent of the voting (or similar type of controlling) interest of the subsidiary. An operating subsidiary may engage in activities that are part of, or incidental to, the business of banking, or are otherwise authorized for a national bank, under 12 USC 24(Seventh), or in other activities authorized for national banks or their subsidiaries under other statutes. (An operating subsidiary does not include statutory subsidiaries or a subsidiary in which the bank acquired shares, in good faith, through foreclosure on collateral, by compromise of a doubtful claim, or to avoid a loss in connection with a debt previously contracted.)

A principal investor is the insured bank that has the largest amount invested in the equity of a bank service company. When two or more insured banks have equal amounts invested, the bank service company must designate one of them as its principal investor.

An undercapitalized bank means the capital level is as described in 12 CFR 6.4(b)(3).

A well-capitalized bank means the capital level is as described in 12 CFR 6.4(b)(1).

A well-managed bank means that, unless otherwise determined in writing by the OCC:

- The bank has a composite CAMELS rating of 1 or 2; and for financial subsidiaries at least a management rating of 2; or
- If the bank has not been examined, the existence and use of managerial resources that OCC Bank Supervision determines satisfactory.
