Living with Lung Cancer

A Study for People with Lung Cancer

What is this study about?

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is conducting telephone interviews with people living with lung cancer. The purpose of these interviews is to learn more about the experiences of individuals with lung cancer with respect to their diagnosis, treatment, and the everyday challenges of living with lung cancer. The results of this study will help CDC develop programs that better address the needs of individuals with lung cancer.

Who can participate?

We are looking for individuals who have been diagnosed with lung cancer longer than 6 months ago. We are looking for all types of individuals, including men, women, smokers, and nonsmokers. The interview would take approximately 1 hour.

What will I receive?

We would like to talk to you on the telephone for about an hour. You will receive $50 for any costs you incur while participating. Participating in this study would in no way affect the current care you are receiving from your provider.
