Dear Agricultural Producer:

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is conducting its first-ever, national survey of energy production on America's farms and ranches. The 2009 On-Farm Energy Production Survey is your opportunity to ensure that America's agricultural producers receive recognition for the environmental benefits they provide and for their commitment to preserving the land on which their livelihood depends.

The 2007 Census of Agriculture counted more than 20,000 farm and ranch operations that were producing energy. In this follow-up survey, we are gathering additional information about these practices, including the use of wind turbines, solar panels, anaerobic digesters and other alternative energy sources.

For your convenience, you can complete the survey via the Internet, using our secure Web-based response system at www.agcensus.usda.gov. Responding online will not only save you time, but will save the government money on return postage and data entry. You can refer to the back of this letter for instructions on how to complete your survey online.

Please be assured that federal law (Title 7, U.S. Code) protects the confidentiality of your individual responses. The information you provide will be published only in tabulated totals and will not be used for purposes of taxation, investigation or regulation.

Whether you choose to complete the survey online or by mail, your response is required by May 24, 2010. If you have any questions or need assistance, please call (888) 424-7828.

Thank you in advance for your support and participation.

Sincerely,
