These data are widely used by government officials, policymakers, researchers, and citizens. They are critically important to making informed decisions concerning public employees, who comprise approximately 15 percent of the total civilian labor force. In addition to describing the nature, scale, and trends of governmental activities in the United States, this information provides specific measures of employment levels, employee pay, and operations of specific governments.

The Census Bureau appreciates your help.

Sincerely,

Thomas L. Mesenbourg
Acting Director
