

DECISION INFORMATION RESOURCES, INC.

Dear Colleague:

The U.S. Department of Education, Institute of Education Sciences (IES), has contracted with the American Institutes of Research (AIR) to conduct a study Identifying Potentially Successful Approaches to Turning Around Chronically Low-Performing Schools. This study seeks to identify schools that have achieved rapid improvements in student outcomes in a short period of time; illuminate the complex range of policies, programs, and practices (PPP) used by these turnaround (TA) schools; and compare them to strategies employed by chronically low-performing schools (CLP) that have not had similar success with improvement.

An important component of this study is the survey of current principals in elementary and middle CLP schools. Your knowledge of the chronology of your school's policies, programs and practices targeting improvement in student outcomes, including accountability and external policies are very important to us. AIR has contracted with Decision Information Resources, Inc. (DIR) an independent research firm, to conduct this survey. At this point, we are testing the draft survey instrument and we need your help.

The survey should only take about 20-25 minutes to complete. Your responses are voluntary and will be kept confidential - you may even choose not to answer any question. All of your answers will be kept private to the extent allowed by law. Your name will never appear in any public reports.

To complete the survey online, please go to the link below, enter the access code provided and follow the instructions.
