Notice of Benefit Determination

According to our records you do not have sufficient railroad compensation to qualify for normal benefits in the current benefit year. However, you may now receive benefits based on an extension of your previous benefit year. The beginning and ending dates of your extended period are shown above.

An extended benefit period runs for 7 consecutive registration periods during which a maximum of 65 days of benefits are payable if an employee has 120 to 179 months of railroad service; or 13 registration periods with a maximum of 130 days of benefits if the employee has 180 or more months of service. According to our records you do not have at least 180 months of railroad service. If you believe you have 180 or more months of service, please complete and return the enclosed Form UI-23.

If you think our records are wrong and that you are qualified for benefits in the current benefit year, complete and return the enclosed Form UI-9.

Sincerely,

For the Director of Program Operations
