

Rural Law Enforcement Training Needs Assessment Survey Website

Welcome to the site of the Rural Law Enforcement Training Needs Assessment Survey: The Rural Policing Institute (RPI) is conducting this survey to assess the special training needs of law enforcement personnel serving rural areas and Indian Country. The RPI, which is within the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC), U.S. Department of Homeland Security, has teamed with the Office of Community Oriented Policing Services, U.S. Department of Justice, to conduct the study. CRA, Inc., a Washington, DC, metropolitan area-based management consulting firm led by a retired law enforcement professional, is managing the survey for the RPI/FLETC and the COPS Office.

Why the Survey is Important to Rural Law Enforcement Personnel: RPI/FLETC will use the information collected via the surveys to allocate future Federal rural law enforcement training resources. The input of executive, field officer, and training academy personnel from each region of the country will ensure that RPI/FLETC directs those resources to meet the needs of the professionals serving rural areas and Indian Country.

Accessing Additional Information about the Surveys: For more information about the RPI Training and the Rural Law Enforcement Training Needs Assessment Survey, please click on the links below:

RPI Training

Frequently Asked Questions about the Rural Law Enforcement Training Needs Assessment Survey.

List of National Law Enforcement Stakeholders Organizations that provided input into the survey design and deployment.

For more information on the study: Please call the CRA-managed Rural Law Enforcement Training Needs Assessment Project at 1-855-272-4640 between 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. EST.