

Justification
Representative Payee Parental Custody Monitoring
 RRB Form G-99d

1. Circumstances of information collection - Under Section 12(a) of the Railroad Retirement Act, the Railroad Retirement Board (RRB) is authorized to select, make payments to, and conduct transactions with, a beneficiary's relative or some other person willing to act on behalf of the beneficiary as a representative payee. The RRB is responsible for determining if direct payment to a beneficiary or payment to a representative payee would best serve the beneficiary's interest.

Inherent in the RRB's authorization to select a representative payee is the responsibility to monitor the payee to assure that the beneficiary's interests are protected. Currently, the RRB has three categories of representative payees: (1) court appointed, (2) RRB appointed, and (3) parent-for-child. One-third of the payees in categories one and two are monitored by the RRB every year so that each payee reports on a triennial basis (OMB Information Collection 3220-0151, Representative Payee Monitoring). The RRB requires court-appointed payees to provide copies of the court accounting records and RRB-appointed payees to provide summarized accounting records.

All parent-for-child representative payees are monitored triennially to verify that the parent still retains custody of the child. The last monitoring was conducted in October 2010.

The monitoring of representative payee accountability by the RRB is prescribed in 20 CFR 266.7.

2. Purposes of collecting/consequences of not collecting the information – The form used by the RRB in conducting the parent-for child monitoring program is Form G-99d, Parental Custody Report. Form G-99d is the computer-generated form used by the RRB as the initial request for soliciting information from a parent-for-child payee. The form is released from RRB headquarters directly to the payee, along with an envelope for its return to the responsible RRB field office shown in the lower portion of the form.

The parent-for-child payee's name and address and other identifying information in the top portion of the form and the name and address of the responsible field office shown in the bottom portion of the form are pre-filled before the form is released.

The RRB field office is responsible for controlling the return of the completed Form G-99d within 30 days. If the initial Form G-99d is not returned within the 30 days, the field office releases a follow-up Form G-99d printed "SECOND REQUEST" at the top of the form. If the follow-up Form G-99d is not returned after 15 days, the field office secure completion of Form G-99c, Representative Payee Evaluation Report, OMB No. 3220-0151. If the returned Form G-99d indicates that the parent no longer has custody of the child, the field office initiates an investigation which could result in a suspension of benefit payments, or the designation by the RRB of another representative payee in place of the parent.

The RRB proposes no changes to Form G-99d.

3. Planned use of improved information technology or technical/legal impediments to further
