

Attachment 1: Recruitment Flier

Do you have a disability that makes it difficult for you to work?

If so, you might be eligible to participate in a Boston University research study looking at improving questions that assess a person's ability to function in daily activities.

Boston University's Health and Disability Research Institute is working with the National Institutes of Health and the Social Security Administration to develop more comprehensive questionnaires for their work disability evaluation process. We are currently recruiting working age adults with some limitations in their functioning in daily activities.

The interview would provide us with feedback regarding how clear questions are, whether you understand the meaning of questions and wording, and whether the questions are relevant to working age adults. It should take no more than an hour of your time and it can be done at location that is convenient for you.

Any and all information you provide to us will be kept secure and private to the extent provided by law. You will not be identified by name in any research publications. You will receive $20 as a thank you for your time.

If you would like more information and to find out if you qualify, please contact:

Kara Bogusz
(617) 638-1995
kbogusz@bu.edu