Content Summary of the 2010 Department of Defense National Survey of Employers

- Experiences with National Guard and Reserve Members These items are used to

 (a) determine how many employees at each employer were absent for military duties in the past 36 months [1];
 (b) determine employer preferences regarding the structure and scheduling of employee absences for military duties [3–11]; and (c) assess the frequency, type of, and response to changes employers experience as a result of employee absences for military duties [12–17].
- Potential Measures to Improve Reserve Component/Employer Relationships These items are used to determine employer preferences for maintaining positive, ongoing relationships with the National Guard and Reserves [18–21].
- General Opinions and Attitudes Toward National Guard and Reserve Employees These items are used to provide measures of employer attitudes towards the training, skills and other positive characteristics that National Guard and Reserve members offer to their employers [22–24].
- Knowledge of Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA) – These items are used to (a) provide measures of employer familiarity with laws/policies that protect National Guard and Reserve members in their civilian jobs [25-26] and (b) determine employer preferences for receiving further information on such laws/policies [27–28].
- Knowledge of Employer Support Programs These items are used to provide measures of employer familiarity with ESGR programs and awards [29–33].
- General Employment Policies These items are used to (a) provide information on the formal employment policies that employers can use to provide discretionary support to National Guard and Reserve members [34–37].
- Employer Characteristics These items are used to (a) create analytic groups for the tabulation volume [1-2, 38-43] and (b) determine what organizational representatives are most likely to fill out the survey to streamline future survey administrations [44–45].
- Taking the Survey These items are used to (a) provide measures of which outreach methods were most effective in recruiting participants [46] and (b) provide respondents the opportunity to offer additional information beyond what was specifically requested in the survey [47].