^{*} States that implement pretreatment programs for their POTWs must evaluate the need to revise local limits once every five years. Therefore, the number of respondents is equal to the number of States that implement pretreatment programs for their POTWs (5). The number of evaluations/responses per year is equal to the average number of pretreatment programs in each State divided by five to obtain a number of average annual responses.

*All burden for this activity will fall on the Federal Government.

*These are one-time only reporting requirements. The total number of respondents anticipated over the next three years has been spread out over the three-year time span for calculation of average annual burden.

 For these activities, burden is apportioned to the States only where the State is the Approval Authority.

#These reporting requirements are based on events that occur spondadally, if at all. A single response is all that is required for each occurrence.

Control Authorities evaluate the need to revise local limits once every five years. Therefore, the number of respondents divided by 5 to obtain the average annual burden.
