Form 1088D – “Abandoned” Calls & “War Dialing” Received at a Business or Residential Telephone Line Complaint

BACKGROUND

An “abandoned” call is a telemarketing call that is not connected to a live representative within two seconds after being answered by a live person. If you receive an abandoned call, you may hear dead air or clicking sounds, sometimes followed by a prerecorded message or a hang up.

“War dialing” is the use of any technology to dial a telephone number to determine whether the line can receive faxes. If you receive “war dialing,” you may hear automated tones as the war dialing equipment gathers and records information about your telephone line.

The FCC’s rules protect against unreasonable telemarketing practices by:

- limiting call “abandonment” by telemarketers to no more than 3% of all telemarketing calls over a 30 day period; and,
- prohibiting “war dialing”

Call abandonment and war dialing are especially difficult to investigate because they often involve calls in which the perpetrator, or even the precise activity, is not easily identified. Not every call that produces dead air or automated tones involves an abandoned call or war dialing.

The more details you are able to provide, the greater the likelihood that the FCC will be able to determine whether a violation has occurred that could lead to an enforcement action.
