

Name of test: Wechsler Preschool and Primary Scale of Intelligence-IV (WPPSI-IV) Block Design

Estimated time burden: 8 minutes

Number of items: 20 (only selected items are administered to participants, based on age and performance)

Summary:

This is a test published by Pearson. This is a subscale of the Wechsler Preschool and Primary Scale of Intelligence IV (WPPSI-IV). In this test, a child uses one- or two-color blocks to re-create a design within a specified time limit, while viewing a constructed model or a picture in a stimulus book.

In this test, participants start at an item appropriate for their age and are administered subsequent items based on their performance. Basal and ceiling rules for the test are applied, such that the number of items a participant must answer can be minimized.

This test is published and copyright held by Pearson; as such, we do not have permission to share items or other published information with third parties. For more information about this test, please visit the test publisher's website:
