

Required reporting

The commander of an aircraft arriving into the United States or operating interstate must report to CDC the presence of persons with any of the following physical conditions, which may indicate a serious contagious illness:

- Fever reported to have lasted more than 48 hours; OR
- Fever of any duration, plus any one of the following: rash, or swelling of the lymph glands, or jaundice (yellowing of skin or eyes); OR
- Persistent diarrhea

Requested reporting

Other physical conditions may also indicate a contagious illness that could pose a public health threat. Therefore, CDC requests reporting of any person with the following physical conditions:

- Fever* of any duration, plus any one of the following
 - o persistent cough
 - o persistent vomiting
 - o difficulty breathing
 - o headache with stiff neck
 - o reduced level of consciousness
 - o unexplained bleeding