Diné College

Diné College is a federally recognized, tribally controlled college, a designated 1994 Land-Grant Institution, and a member in good standing with the American Indian Higher Education Consortium (AIHEC). Chartered in 1968, Diné College has attained remarkable achievements in its relatively short existence. Beginning in 1976, the college was recognized by the Higher Learning Commission as a candidate for accreditation. In 1968, Diné College became the first Tribal College, and was later joined by other tribal colleges under the statutory requirements of the Tribally Controlled Community College Assistance Act of 1978. In June 2002, the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights officially recognized Diné College, and other Tribally Controlled Colleges as a Minority Serving Institution.

What is the Safeguarding Natural Heritage Program?

The "Safeguarding Natural Heritage Program: Strengthening Navajo Youth Connections to the Land" is an educational outreach program designed to enhance youths' exposure to agriculture, natural resources, and wildlife biology, through activities within the environs of the communities of the Navajo Nation. The program will expose students to sustainable agriculture and farming, with a view to preserve their natural heritage, as well as increase students' awareness of invasive species issues. Additionally, students will learn about potential job opportunities for college graduates, not only within their own tribal community, but potentially within APHIS.

The 12-day program is open to students 14 to 17 years of age who wish to learn more about safeguarding their natural heritage, both within and outside of the Navajo Nation. Students chosen to participate will gain experience through hands-on labs, workshops, discussions, field trips, and team-building activities.

Who is Sponsoring the Safeguarding Natural Heritage Program?

USDA-APHIS is joining forces with Diné College to sponsor the "Safeguarding Natural Heritage Program: Strengthening Navajo Youth Connections to the Land".

How Much Will it Cost?

Students selected for the program will pay only the cost of transportation to travel to the Diné College campus on June 17, and to return to their home on June 29. The cost of tuition, dormitory housing, meals, and lab fees, will be covered by APHIS.
