TITLE OF INFORMATION COLLECTION: Solve the Outbreak iPad Survey

PURPOSE:

“Solve the Outbreak” is a new way to learn about epidemiology and public health. It’s a free, interactive iPad app that lets you take on the role of an EIS officer, also known as a Disease Detective. In the real world, CDC’s EIS officers are on the front lines, investigating new outbreaks wherever they occur. In the app, users have to figure out what disease they’re dealing with and how the outbreak started.

We see mobile devices as a growing arena to engage people on health topics. We also know that younger audiences are interested in apps, and began to look at ways the app could help CDC reach its educational goals. There has always been great interest in CDC’s disease detectives, and the apps space seemed like a perfect match for developing engaging, interactive ways to learn about science, epidemiology, and how disease detectives solve outbreaks. By taking educational health information and putting it in the context of an interactive app, it’s our hope that we’ll increase overall knowledge and interest in health, science, and epidemiology, especially among teens and young adults.

The Solve the Outbreak survey is administered via a push notification on a user’s mobile device. The push notification will link to a webpage so users can complete the survey. The information collected from our users will help ensure that users have an effective and satisfying experience with the iPad app. This feedback will provide insights into our user’s perceptions, experiences and expectations of the app. These collections will allow for ongoing, collaborative and actionable communications between the Agency and the app users. It will also allow feedback to contribute directly to the improvement of the app.
