National Opinion Research Center (NORC) at
The University of Chicago
55 East Monroe Street, 30th Floor
Chicago, Illinois 60603
(312) 759-5086

Dear Mr. Herda,

I write today on behalf of the National Legal Aid & Defender Association (NLADA) to support the application of the National Opinion Research Center (NORC) to conduct the 2011 National Survey of Indigent Defense Systems (NSIDS) on behalf of the United States Department of Justice, Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) under grant solicitation number 2011-BJS-2994. NLADA is a national, non-profit membership association dedicated to quality legal representation for people of insufficient means. Created in 1911, NLADA has been a leader in supporting equal justice for nearly 100 years. NLADA has the time, substantive knowledge and qualified staff to partner with NORC on this important endeavor.

NLADA brings two critical capacities to the project. Since 2002, NLADA's Justice Standards, Evaluation and Research Initiative (JSERI) has been the nation's recognized leader in the development of assessment protocols by which to judge a jurisdiction's compliance with national standards for right to counsel services. JSERI staff has travelled to 47 of the 50 states to study indigent defense services and/or provide technical assistance to state and local policy-makers on the need to meet basic foundational criminal justice standards. JSERI has extensive knowledge about how services are provided in many of the nation's 3,143 counties or county-equivalents.

NLADA's American Council of Chief Defenders (ACCD) is a national community of public defense leaders dedicated to securing a fair justice system and ensuring high quality legal representation for people facing loss of life, freedom or family. The mission of the ACCD is to provide tools, strategies, mutual support, training and information to chief defenders; to speak as a national voice for public defense; to promote best practices in the leadership, management, and administration of justice; and to support development and reform of public defense systems. To the extent that many public defender leaders will be involved in filling out the NSIDS questionnaire, their support for this project is critical.

A successful NSIDS is critical step on the path toward one day ensuring that every person charge with a crime and facing jail time that lacks the resources to retain private counsel receives a constitutionally-adequate lawyer. Today, public defense delivery systems lag far behind the other components of the criminal justice system when it comes to data collection, analysis, and the ability to form policy based on objective information. With scarce resources and ever-growing caseloads most right-to-counsel systems dedicate almost every available funding dollar to direct client services, rather than infrastructure, leaving most unable to build case-tracking management systems that could produce data to inform criminal justice decision-making. In many jurisdictions, almost no data is collected at all.

The lack of objective public defense data and information perpetuates poor decision-making about the right to counsel. Without accurate, verifiable, objective data readily available to them, decision-makers are left to form criminal justice policy based solely on anecdotal information, and public attitudes are consigned to speculation, intuition, presumption, and even bias. With access to the timely, accurate and complete information, policymakers can fulfill their duty to continually evaluate the efficacy of their criminal justice policy decisions, thereby assuring victims, the accused and the general public that our courts' resulting verdicts are fair, correct, swift and final.

The National Opinion Research Center proved their technical capabilities with the 2007 Public Defender Census, widely regarded as the most comprehensive and detailed survey on public defender systems in the country ever. NLADA, and in particular the ACCD, appreciated that NORC took the time to listen to the concerns of people in the field in the development of the census instrument. The successful response rate is indicative of the trust the indigent defense community has with NORC. We look forward to partnering with you on this most needed project.

Dear Mr. Herda,

The National Association of Counties (NACo), through its 501(c)(3) subsidiary, the National Association of Counties Research Foundation (NACoRF), is pleased to be able to support the application of the National Opinion Research Center (NORC) to conduct the 2011 National Survey of Indigent Defense Systems (NSIDS) on behalf of the United States Department of Justice, Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) under grant solicitation number 2011-BJS-2994. The National Opinion Research Center proved their technical capabilities with the 2007 Public Defender Census, widely regarded as the most comprehensive and detailed survey on public defender systems.

Established in 1935, NACo is the only organization that represents the interests of the nation's 3,068 counties and their locally elected officials. Given their roles and responsibilities in the criminal justice system, counties are significant partners in efforts to ensure policymakers have access to critical information to address issues and make informed decisions.

As a partner in the proposed effort, NACoRF will provide assistance to meeting the project goals as outlined in the proposal by providing assistance in the design and development of the survey and assisting with county responses. NACoRF looks forward to the opportunity to work in partnership with NORC on this important project.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Herda:

The National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers (NACDL) is pleased to submit this letter confirming its willingness to collaborate with the National Opinion Research Center (NORC) at the University of Chicago on the 2011 National Survey of Indigent Defense Systems should they be awarded the contract.

NACDL is the preeminent organization in the United States advancing the mission of criminal defense lawyers to ensure justice and due process for persons accused of crime or other misconduct. A professional bar association founded in 1958, NACDL's more than 10,000 direct members – and 90 state, local and international affiliate organizations with another 35,000 members – include private criminal defense lawyers, public defenders, active U.S. military defense counsel, law professors and judges committed to preserving fairness within America's criminal justice system.

By leveraging its unique strength – its members – NACDL has made unparalleled contributions to the study of America's indigent defense system. Drawing almost entirely on research collected by volunteer NACDL members and staff, NACDL issued unprecedented studies of America's misdemeanor and problem solving courts, with another thorough study of a state-level misdemeanor system about to be released. These two published reports, entitled Minor Crimes, Massive Waste: The Terrible Toll of America's Broken Misdemeanor Courts and America's Problem-Solving Courts: The Criminal Costs of Treatment and the Case for Reform have together generated hundreds of newspapers, been cited in dozens of peer-reviewed law review, sociology and other scholarly articles, entered into the Congressional Record, and drawn upon in the formation of reform legislation.

"Liberty's Last Champion"

The experience of NACDL's volunteer leaders and staff can provide unique support to NORC with respect to a number of the deliverables identified in the above-referenced proposal. Specifically, NACDL personnel are willing to assist NORC to design and refine the survey questionnaire. NACDL is also willing to assist in promoting the survey and encouraging responses.

By this letter we affirm our willingness to partner with NORC should they be awarded this grant. We look forward to working with you, and are confident that together we will produce significant results.

Sincerely,

Dear (PNAME),

About a month ago we sent you the 2013 National Survey of Indigent Defense Systems (NSIDS). According to our records, we have not yet received a completed questionnaire from your office.

We are writing again because, in order to ensure a complete accounting of the nation's indigent defense systems, we need your office to respond. The data collected will provide not only a benchmark against which future changes can be measured, but also a dataset that allows individuals to compare delivery models and variations in ways to meet national standards for the provision of indigent defense.

The Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS), U.S. Department of Justice is sponsoring the census. NORC at the University of Chicago has been engaged as the data collection agent. The National Legal Aid and Defender Association (NLADA), the National Association of Counties (NACo), the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers (NACDL), and the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on Legal Aid and Indigent Defendants (ABA SCLAID) have expressed their support for this survey. Findings will be available from the BJS website (www.ojp.usdoj.gov/bjs) in 20XX.

For your convenience, you can respond to the 2013 NSIDS in one of two ways:

Web: Please visit this user-friendly website to access the questionnaire: insert weblink

For security purposes, use the Personal Identification Number (PIN) and password printed below to access the web questionnaire:
