WIC Nutrition Education Study - Site Survey

Nutrition Education Contacts and Methods

For all questions, nutrition education includes breastfeeding education.

1. How many days per month does the site provide WIC nutrition education services?
(Count the days when any form of nutrition education is provided. If it varies from month to month, enter the number of days WIC nutrition education services were provided last month.)

2. Are participants at the site classified into nutrition risk levels?
(e.g., high risk, not high risk)

Yes
 No

3. What, if any, modifications to nutrition education does the site make based on participant's risk levels or nutrition risks?
For this question, "high risk" includes participants identified as high risk and/or participants with nutrition risks requiring special attention. (Select all that apply.)

- There are no modifications to nutrition education for high risk participants.
- High risk participants receive more nutrition education contacts.
- High risk participants receive nutrition education from a dietitian
- High risk participants are given longer appointment times.
- High risk participants receive one-on-one counseling instead of group sessions or other types of education.
- High risk participants receive more detailed and individualized care plans.
- There is more follow-up on referrals for high risk participants.
