Electronic/EFT Tax Refund Primary Research: Converting Paper Check Users
Quantitative Questionnaire
July 2014

Study Design

The qualitative phase of this research determined the attributes, benefits, emotions and values most associated with tax refunds. The two main goals of the quantitative study are to:

1. Identify with greater precision the demographic, behavioral and attitudinal delineators of those who choose to receive their tax refund by paper check
2. Identify the incidence and prevalence of major reasons people have for their behavior and related attitudes, across the range of taxpayers.

Study Method

2,600 total interviews completed online via a nationally representative, probability-based online panel

- 2,000 interviews among paper check recipients, including social security recipients, the under/unbanked, switchers and the general population
- 600 interviews with taxpayers who receive their tax refund via EFT

All respondents:

- a) Must have received IRS federal income tax refund for most recent tax year
- b) Must be primary or joint decision maker for how to receive tax refund

Questionnaire Outline

1. Demographic and screening questions
2. Tax preparation
3. Banking habits and benefits
4. Means-end laddering
5. Persuasive statement ratings
6. Demographics

IV. MEANS-END LADDERINGINTRODUCTION

There are many important variables in deciding whether to receive your personal income tax refund by paper check mailed to your home, or by direct deposit to your bank account or to a prepaid debit card.

The next few questions will ask you to consider several of these variables and to indicate whether you feel each is more associated with paper check refunds or refunds by direct deposit, and to what degree they are associated in your mind.

You may not have equal experience with both paper check refunds and refunds by direct deposit, which is perfectly all right. Just answer the questions based upon all that you have experienced, read, or heard about each.

ATTRIBUTES

Q26 The [first/next] statement is:

RANDOMIZE STATEMENTS

1. My tax returns get processed fast by the IRS
2. My refund is sent out quickly by the IRS
3. My refund gets into my hands fast
4. The process is prone to human mistakes by the IRS
5. The process allows bad people to steal my refund
6. The process allows me to easily trace lost or stolen money and recover my refund
7. The process reduces the things I have to do to get my refund into my possession
8. The process means I don't have to be on the look-out for my refund
9. I am charged small or no fees for handling my refund
10. The government will gain access to sensitive financial information about me

FOR EACH STATEMENT ASK:

Do you see this idea as being more associated with paper check refunds, or direct deposit refunds, or do you perceive there to be no difference based upon how you get your tax refund

- 1 More associated with paper checks
- 2 More associated with direct deposit
- 3 Equally associated with both
