Introduction

You are being asked to take part in a research study. Before you agree to take part in this study, please read this consent form and ask as many questions as you need to be sure you understand the possible risks and benefits.

This consent form has important facts to help you decide if it is in your best interest for you to take part in this study. If you have questions that are not answered in this consent form, one of the research staff will be happy to give you more information.

Purpose of the Study

The purpose of this research study is to examine a model of performance feedback to gain a deeper understanding of feedback characteristics that may be necessary for teachers to move from receiving feedback to improved performance in the context of teacher evaluation systems. Specifically, the study will examine the relationship among the usefulness of feedback, accuracy of feedback, credibility of the person providing feedback, learning opportunities related to the feedback, responsiveness to feedback, and teacher performance. The results of the study can be used to inform future training and guidance on providing feedback in teacher evaluation systems. In this first phase of the study, we will be piloting the survey in order to gather data to refine the survey prior to the full study.

Description of the Research Study

The study is funded by the U.S. Department of Education and is being conducted by Marzano Research Laboratory. This study will involve about 600 teachers in about four districts in one of the Central Region states.

If you agree to participate in the study, you will be asked to:

- Complete a survey in the spring of 2014. The survey takes about 30 minutes to complete and asks questions about your experiences with the feedback you received as part of your district's teacher evaluation system. The survey includes questions about the usefulness and accuracy of the feedback you received, the credibility of the person providing your feedback, the access you had to opportunities related to the feedback, and your responsiveness to the feedback. The survey also includes questions about background information, such as grade level and subject taught.
- Potentially participate in a one-hour interview in which you will be asked to provide feedback on the clarity of the survey.

Risks or Discomforts

There are no foreseeable risks to participants in this study.

New Findings

The research staff will tell you of any information learned during this study that might cause you to change your mind about taking part in this study.

Possible Benefits

Upon completion of the survey you will receive $30 for your efforts. There are no other direct benefits to you from taking part in this study. However, the study has the potential to provide useful information for the development and refinement of teacher evaluation systems. Teachers may ultimately benefit from this study if this information is used to inform future training and guidance on providing feedback in teacher evaluation systems.

Confidentiality

We will protect information about you and your participation in this research study to the best of our ability. All study data (for example, surveys and evaluation ratings) will remain in the possession of the research staff at all times. Each participant will be assigned a unique identification number to match data collected from them. Any
