

INPUT ON COLLECTIONS FROM LANDS ADMINISTERED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR THAT ARE LOCATED AT NON-FEDERAL FACILITIES

OMB CONTROL NUMBER 1084-XXXX,
EXPIRATION DATE: xx/xx/20xx

Since the passage of the Antiquities Act in 1906, universities, museums, and other organizations have carried out scientific research on lands administered by the Department of the Interior (DOI). These projects have been invaluable to the public, the advancement of science, and DOI's programs. We recognize the vital role of our partners in this area and appreciate their ongoing efforts to recover, study, and preserve the millions of specimens, artifacts, and associated records that comprise the DOI museum objects that they hold in trust for all Americans.¹

Most of these collections are documented, properly housed, and available for research. However, others may exist as well—for which documentation is scant, missing, or non-existent. We are seeking basic information about these unknown “legacy collections” to meet our mandate to identify, locate, and assess their condition.

We have no intention of relocating collections; the objective is enhanced documentation and information in support of our mutual goals of preservation and use. We recognize that there may be little or no specific information to provide to us other than conjecture. However, any information that you can provide will further our ability to work in partnership with your institution to support our shared goals. Thank you.

Should you have any comments or questions, please contact Steven Floray at the U.S. Department of the Interior Museum Program by email Steven_Floray@ios.doi.gov or telephone (202) 513-7565.

¹DOI Museum Objects: All artifacts and specimens which were recovered from public lands managed at the time by the Department, along with the associated project records. Those artifacts, specimens, and archives are established as Federal property under Federal law, implementing regulations, and Executives Orders. Common law also confers rights to landowners, including the Federal government, such as ownership of property, resources, and other tangible assets existing on or originating from those lands, unless those rights were previously relinquished, sold, awarded, or otherwise reassigned. Also, permits and other agreements for the collection of artifacts and specimens from public lands managed at the time by the Department further establish Federal ownership.

DOI is not retroactively asserting ownership of all collections that originated on lands that are now managed by DOI, prior to DOI managing those lands. DOI will not require, nor does it expect any non-Federal repositories to engage in laborious research to determine the land ownership status for each location where their specimens were collected. This type of work, if needed, is often done by bureau staff or may be contracted out by a bureau. DOI will be asking non-Federal Repositories to make a good faith effort to provide information they have available if the repository knows the collections were made on DOI lands at the time of collection.
