7. Describe nature of time sensitivity: (Please provide 2-3 sentences below.)

To address the growing population of Americans living with one or more chronic conditions, CDC has invested in evidence-based self-management education programs. However, participation in such programs remains low. Studies indicate many individuals who could benefit from self-management education have not participated because they have never heard of self-management education. It is imperative that CDC implement concept and channels testing efforts in the immediate future to develop a highly effective, engaging self-management education visibility campaign that appeals to people with a variety of chronic diseases, including arthritis, diabetes, heart disease, and others in order to leverage the overall benefit of self-management education programs to a wide patient audience. Two rounds of research are needed to test preliminary and revised concepts and channels prior to the end of this project (December 31, 2013).
