IMPORTANT NOTICES

This form pertains to payment of a residual lump sum (RLS) to your survivors. An RLS is a special payment under the Railroad Retirement Act to insure that you and your survivors receive at least as much in railroad retirement benefits as you paid in railroad retirement taxes before January 1, 1975 (plus an allowance for interest). Most employees do receive benefits exceeding their taxes. Beneficiaries must be specifically named. You may designate your estate, but designations such as "son," "heirs," or "executor" are not acceptable.

WHO SHOULD FILE

- 1. An employee who may have a residual lump sum and wishes to designate beneficiaries must meet the following conditions:
  - You began to work for a railroad or other employer covered by the Act before 1975, and
  - > you wish to designate your own beneficiary (see Railroad Retirement Act Order of Precedence below), and
  - > you have not received a railroad retirement annuity or have received one for less than two years.
- 2. An employee who wishes to change beneficiaries.
- 3. An employee who filed a designation of beneficiary before June 22, 1948, on Form AA-11, which is no longer valid. If you still wish to have a designation on record, you must file a new form.
