

NOAA FISHERIES

2016 Atlantic HMS Tournaments Survey

Operator Expenses

Your response is important!

About this survey:

Recreational fisheries are important to the national economy, with saltwater angler expenditures contributing to $56 billion in total economic output annually. While billfish tournaments have been surveyed as recently as the 1990s, this survey has never before been conducted for all Atlantic highly migratory species (HMS) tournaments. The responses to this survey will be entered into an economics model that will show how the money spent at HMS tournaments goes into the community sectors, such as restaurants, hotels, tackle and bait shops, marinas, and other businesses. This information is critical for fishery managers to identify potential impacts that regulations may have on fishing communities, and to take measures that protect the economic success of local businesses.

Please take a moment to complete this survey. Thank you for helping NOAA sustainably manage our nation's marine resources.
