Public Libraries and Health Information

You are invited to participate in a study conducted by researchers at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. This study is about the National Library of Medicine's services to public libraries, and the information and resources that public libraries need to deal with health-related government programs. You have been asked to participate because you are an employee of a public library. This study will include employees of central libraries in public library systems of 20 states in the U.S. Participation involves completion of this survey. There is minimal risk to you. We don't expect any direct benefits to you from participation in this study.

The purpose of this research is to inform and improve the National Library of Medicine's services to public libraries, as well as increase NLM's understanding of the resource and education needs of public library workers.

This is a Web-based survey that can be taken at any Internet-connected computer of your choice, and should take less than 30 minutes to complete.

There is minimal risk to you. No information identifying you as an individual will be collected for this study. Only aggregate data about community size and state will be analyzed by the National Library of Medicine. Any publications resulting from this study will identify your library only by community size, as 'rural', 'suburban', or 'urban', and give the name of the state. Participants who choose to tell us the name of their library will have their library's name entered into a raffle to win a free iPad for the library. There is a 1 in 1,558 chance that your library will win a free iPad. We don't expect any direct benefits to you from participation in this study.

You may ask any questions about the research at any time. If you have questions about the survey you should contact Griselle Sánchez-Diettert, the Project Director at the University of Wisconsin Survey Center at (608) 262-2164, or you may contact Catherine Arnott Smith, the study's Principal Investigator at (608) 890-1334.

If you are not satisfied with the response of the research team, have more questions, or want to talk with someone about your rights as a research participant, you should contact the University of Wisconsin Education and Social/Behavioral Science Human Subjects Research Office at (608) 263-2320.

Your participation is completely voluntary. If you decide not to participate or to withdraw from the study, you may do so without penalty or effect on your employment.

Instructions to complete the survey:

To choose a response, click on the button that corresponds to your answer.

You can skip questions if you are unable to answer them.

If you would like to change your answer, click on a different button or for questions with multiple answers just click the same button again.

You may go back to earlier pages by clicking the 'BACK' button at the bottom of the screen. To advance to the next page of the survey click the 'NEXT' button.

If you start the survey and are unable to finish it, you can exit by simply closing the browser window. However, if you close your browser before finishing the survey you will need to start again from the beginning.

After the entire survey has been completed and all the data are ready to be submitted, please click on the 'SUBMIT' button on the last page.

We appreciate your time and effort in assisting us by completing this survey.

By clicking here and completing the survey you are consenting to participate in the study.
