Upper Midwest Tickborne Disease Prevention Survey

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the Midwest Center of Excellence for Vectorborne Disease, and multiple sites in the upper Midwest are conducting a survey to better understand knowledge, attitudes, and behaviors regarding ticks and the diseases they spread. Households in the upper Midwest region of the U.S. have been randomly selected to participate. If your household was selected to participate, you should have received a postcard with information on how to take the survey.

If you received an invitation postcard and have questions, please contact your study coordinator using the below information:
