H4HSCRED

By the end of [February 2016], had you completed high school with a high school diploma, a GED, or another high school equivalency?

1=Yes, a high school diploma (not including Adult High School Diplomas)

2=Yes, a GED (General Education Development diploma)

3=Yes, another high school equivalency such as HiSET, TASC, NEDP, or AHSD (Adult High School Diploma)

4=Yes, a certificate of attendance or completion

0=No

Help Text:

High school diplomas (not including an Adult High School Diploma): Most high school students receive this credential when they graduate from a public or private high school. It includes regular high school diplomas, diplomas with honors, and International Baccalaureate (IB) diplomas. It does not include an Adult High School Diploma (AHSD) (see definition for Another high school equivalency below).

GED (General Education Development diploma): The GED is the most common high school equivalency credential. People without a high school diploma can take four subject tests to show that they have high school-level knowledge. The GED is received when all four subject tests are passed.

Another high school equivalency: This includes a wide range of credentials similar to the GED. These include HiSET, TASC, the National External Diploma Program (NEDP), and Adult High School Diplomas (AHSD), but there are many others.

A certificate of attendance or completion: This is a certificate given to students who complete the 12th grade in a public high school, but do not obtain enough credits, do not complete all core courses, or do not pass required testing to earn a high school diploma. These are rare.

If you had not received any of these high school credentials by the end of [February 2016], answer "No."

Select the month and year in which you last attended a traditional or alternative high school for teenage students. If you attended an adult high school completion program to prepare for a GED or other high school equivalency, think back to the high school you attended before that. If you are unsure of the exact date, please provide your best guess.

Traditional high schools are public or private high schools that most teenage students attend.

Alternative high schools are public schools attended by teenagers who do not do well at a traditional high school because they do poorly in their courses, get in trouble, are absent a lot, or have other difficulties. Alternative high schools may have different types of teaching, schedules, or services to help students.

Adult high school completion programs prepare students to take the test for the GED or another high school equivalency (for example, HiSET, TASC, NEDP, AHSD (Adult High School Diploma)). Two examples are Adult Secondary Education (ASE) programs and the National External Diploma Program (NEDP), but there are many others. These programs are for people who are not attending a public or private high school and are often taken through a community college, an adult education organization, or online. If you attended an adult high school completion program to prepare for a GED or other high school equivalency, think back to the high school you attended before that.

Alternative high schools are public schools attended by teenagers who do not do well at a traditional high school because they do poorly in their courses, get in trouble, are absent a lot, or have other difficulties. Alternative high schools may have different types of teaching, schedules, or services to help students.

Adult high school completion programs prepare students to take the exam for the GED or another high school equivalency (for example, HiSET, TASC, NEDP, AHSD - Adult High School Diploma). Two examples are Adult Secondary Education (ASE) programs and the National External Diploma Program (NEDP), but there are many others. 1=Bachelor's degree (usually a 4-year degree)

4=Not working on a degree or certificate, but taking undergraduate classes

5=Graduate program or classes (for example, Master's or PhD)

Help Text:

Bachelor's degree: A bachelor's degree is usually awarded by a 4-year college or university and usually requires at least 4 years of full-time, college-level work. If you were in a joint bachelor's and graduate program, select "Bachelor's degree program (usually a 4-year degree)."

Associate's degree: An associate's degree normally requires at least 2, but less than 4 years, of full-time equivalent college work. Include university transfer programs.

Certificate or diploma from a school that provides occupational training: Certificates or diplomas usually take less than two years to complete and are usually designed to give people the skills needed for direct entry to employment in a trade or to earn a license such as a cosmetology license. Other examples include certificates in administrative support, computer programming, and medical records. A certificate is different from a certification or license. Certificates are typically awarded for life (like a degree). On the other hand, certifications and licenses are typically time-limited and have to be renewed. Include certificates, but do not include certifications or licenses. Also, do not include certificates of attendance or participation in a short-term training (for example, 1 day).

Not working on a degree or certificate, but taking undergraduate classes: This means taking courses at the bachelor's level or below, but not formally enrolling in a bachelor's, associate's, or certificate program.

Graduate program or classes (for example, Master's or PhD): This means enrollment in a master's program (for example, MA, MS, MBA) or doctoral program (for example, Ph.D., Ed.D, MD, JD) or taking classes at that level. If you were enrolled in a joint bachelor's and graduate program, select "Bachelor's degree program (usually a 4-year degree)."

H4REMEVER

Remedial or developmental courses are used to strengthen students' skills before they take their first college-level course in math, reading, or other subjects. 2=Yes, more than one program

1=Yes, one program

0=No

Help Text:

People sometimes prepare to enter a trade or profession through a program that combines work experience with education or formal training. Examples of these work experience program are internships, co-ops, practicums, and apprenticeships.

An internship is any formal or informal program that provides on-the-job-experience for beginners in an occupation or profession. Many work in internships in order to learn new skills or to gain job experience. Internships can be full- or part-time, paid or unpaid, depending on the employer and the career field. For people in college or trade school, internships are usually one-term work assignments, most often in the summer, but not always.

A practicum is a college course designed to give students supervised practical hands-on experience of what they have learned or are learning in class. One example of a practicum is student teaching for education majors.

An externship is similar to an internship but is usually for a shorter period of time, is usually unpaid, and does not offer college or trade school credit. Participants observe or "job shadow" but have less hands-on work experience than interns.

A co-op (or co-operative education) combines classroom education with practical work experience with partnering employers. In some co-ops students alternate school terms with work terms. In others students split the day between school and work. Co-ops often lead to a 5-year bachelor's degree.

In an apprenticeship the apprentice is paid a training salary and receives both instruction and on-the job training. Some apprenticeships lead to journeyman status. Some apprentices get a state or federal apprenticeship registration number. Just a few examples include carpenter, chef, electrician, and plumbing apprenticeships.

Please indicate which statement describes this job and employer.

Different job: If your job duties are mostly different than they were in the first job you had after you [received your high school diploma/ received your certificate of attendance or completion/ last attended high school], consider this a different job.

Different employer: If this job is with a different location or branch of the employer you had in the first job after you [received your high school diploma/ received your certificate of attendance or completion/ last attended high school], consider this the same employer. For example, if you worked for two different locations of a fast food chain, consider these the same employer. If you worked for two totally different employers that are in the same type of business (for example, two unrelated restaurants), consider these different employers.

Follow these steps to search the database of occupations and choose the best match.

1. In the first text box, type in the title of the job (for example, auto mechanic or hair stylist).
2. In the second text box, type in a few words or phrases describing the tasks you complete on this job most often (for example, diagnose problems with cars and trucks and make repairs; shampoo, cut, color and style hair)
3. Click the "ENTER" button to display options that are the best match with the job title and tasks you typed in.
4. Review the descriptions of the options shown.
 - If a close match is shown, click the "Select" button next to it. When the confirmation window appears, confirm your response to move on to the next question.
 - If a close match is not shown, slightly changing the job title or adding additional job tasks may find a better match. If you are still unable to find a close match, click the "None of the Above" button at the bottom of the list and go to step 5.
 - If no options are shown (you will see three dropdown boxes, but not job titles), check your spelling in the text boxes and repeat the process. If no options are shown again, go to step 5.
5. You will see three drop down boxes.
 - For the first dropdown menu, select the general area that is the best fit for your job.
 - The second dropdown menu will now list more specific categories within the general area. Select the specific area that is the best fit for your job.
 - The third box dropdown menu will now list detailed categories within the specific area. Select the detailed occupation classification that is the best fit for your job.

Help Text:

Benefits are a type of non-monetary employee compensation provided in addition to salary.

Answer "Yes" for each benefit this employer offered to you, even if you did not use it.

Health insurance: This pays all or part of the costs for your medical, dental, vision, or other health care. It may be either completely employer-paid, or offered at a reduced rate as an employee-paid benefit.

Life insurance: This provides a predetermined amount of money to the family member or other person you have identified to receive the support in case of death. It may be either completely employer-paid, or offered at a reduced rate as an employee-paid benefit.

Retirement benefits: These are funds that you, your employer, or both, can set aside to invest for use once you retirement years. In defined benefit plans (sometimes called pension plans), at the time of retirement, employees are provided a set amount based on salary or years of service. In defined contribution plans like a 401(k)/403(b), both employee and employer contribute specific amounts but the benefit available upon retirement is tied to investment earnings. Indicate whether you received benefits or scholarships in any of the specific categories listed. The below types of aid may come to you directly or may be given to the financial aid office at your school.

Scholarships or tuition reimbursement for school: This is money that some employers offer to help employees pay for their education at a college or trade school. It may come to you directly or may be given to the financial aid office at your school. It does not need to be paid back to your employer. If this employer offered this, answer "Yes" even if you did not use it.

Paid vacation, sick, or personal days: This is paid time off from work for vacation, illness, or responsibilities outside of work (such as child care).

2=Associate's degree (usually a 2-year degree)

3=Certificate or diploma from a school that provides occupational training (usually takes 2 years or less to complete, often leading to a license, such as cosmetology)

4=Not working on a degree or certificate, but taking undergraduate classes

5=Graduate program or classes (for example, Master's or PhD)

Help Text:

Bachelor's degree: A bachelor's degree is usually awarded by a 4-year college or university and usually requires at least 4 years of full-time, college-level work. If you were in a joint bachelor's and graduate program, select "Bachelor's degree program (usually a 4-year degree)."

Associate's degree: An associate's degree normally requires at least 2, but less than 4 years, of full-time equivalent college work. Include university transfer programs.

Certificate or diploma from a school that provides occupational training: Certificates or diplomas usually take less than two years to complete and are usually designed to give people the skills needed for direct entry to employment in a trade or to earn a license such as a cosmetology license. Other examples include certificates in administrative support, computer programming, and medical records. Certificates are typically awarded for life (like a degree). Do not include certifications or licenses here. Certifications and licenses are typically time-limited and have to be renewed. Do not include certificates of attendance or participation in a short-term training (for example, 1 day).

Not working on a degree or certificate, but taking undergraduate classes: This means taking courses at the bachelor's level or below, but not formally enrolling in a bachelor's, associate's, or certificate program.

Graduate program or classes (for example, Master's or PhD): This means enrollment in a master's program (for example, MA, MS, MBA) or doctoral program (for example, Ph.D., Ed.D, MD, JD) or taking classes at that level. If you were enrolled in a joint bachelor's and graduate program, select "Bachelor's degree program (usually a 4-year degree)."

If you had ADHD or ADD (Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder or Attention Deficit Disorder) at any time before the end of [February 2016], answer "No" unless you also had another specific learning disability. ADHD or ADD is a condition of not being able to pay attention, being overactive, or not being able to control behavior, or a combination of these.

Help Text:

Gender includes gender identity and gender expression. Gender identity means one's inner sense of one's own gender, which may or may not match the sex assigned at birth. Different people choose to express their gender identity differently. For some, gender may be expressed through, for example, dress, grooming, mannerisms, speech patterns, and social interactions. Gender expression usually ranges between masculine and feminine, and some transgender people express their gender consistent with how they identify internally, rather than in accordance with the sex they were assigned at birth.

Transgender: When a person's birth sex and gender do not match, they might think of themselves as transgender.

Genderqueer or gender nonconforming: These are terms used to identify people whose gender may not conform to the sex they were assigned at birth. Often these terms may be used by people who identify their gender as something other than only "male" or "female". Their gender may fall somewhere between male and female, or may fall outside the traditional male/female gender distinctions.

Introduction to Section A

H4AINTRO

Before we begin, please note that this survey's data collection began in March 2016. Most questions will focus on your activities through the end of [February 2016] so that all survey participants report on the same time period.

First, we have some questions about your high school experience.

Help Text:

If you have any questions about this study, you may contact the Help Desk at 1-877-282-4757.

A01

H4HSCRED

By the end of [February 2016], had you completed high school with a high school diploma, a GED, or another high school equivalency?

1=Yes, a high school diploma (not including Adult High School Diplomas)

2=Yes, a GED (General Education Development diploma)

3=Yes, another high school equivalency such as HiSET, TASC, NEDP, or AHSD (Adult High School Diploma)

4=Yes, a certificate of attendance or completion

0=No

Help Text:

High school diplomas (not including an Adult High School Diploma): Most high school students receive this credential when they graduate from a public or private high school. It includes regular high school diplomas, diplomas with honors, and International Baccalaureate (IB) diplomas. It does not include an Adult High School Diploma (AHSD) (see definition for Another high school equivalency below).

GED (General Education Development diploma): The GED is the most common high school equivalency credential. People without a high school diploma can take four subject tests to show that they have high school-level knowledge. The GED is received when all four subject tests are passed.

Another high school equivalency: This includes a wide range of credentials similar to the GED. These include HiSET, TASC, the National External Diploma Program (NEDP), and Adult High School Diplomas (AHSD), but there are many others.

A certificate of attendance or completion: This is a certificate given to students who complete the 12th grade in a public high school, but do not obtain enough credits, do not complete all core courses, or do not pass required testing to earn a high school diploma. These are rare.

If you had not received any of these high school credentials by the end of [February 2016], answer “No.”

H4CURGRADE

What grade were you in when you last attended high school? (If you attended an adult high school completion program, think back to the high school you attended before that.)

- 1=9th grade
- 2=10th grade
- 3=11th grade
- 4=12th grade

Help Text:

Select the grade you were in whether you completed it or not. Include only attendance at traditional or alternative schools for teenage students. If you attended an adult high school completion program to prepare for a GED or other high school equivalency, think back to the high school you attended before that.

Traditional high schools are public or private high schools that most teenage students attend.

Alternative high schools are public schools attended by teenagers who do not do well at a traditional high school because they do poorly in their courses, get in trouble, are absent a lot, or have other difficulties. Alternative high schools may have different types of teaching, schedules, or services to help students.

Adult high school completion programs prepare students to take the exam for the GED or another high school equivalency (for example, HiSET, TASC, NEDP, AHSD - Adult High School Diploma). Two examples are Adult Secondary Education (ASE) programs and the National External Diploma Program (NEDP), but there are many others. These programs are for people who are not attending a public or private high school and are often taken through a community college, an adult education organization, or online. If you attended an adult high school completion program to prepare for a GED or other high school equivalency, think back to the high school you attended before that.

Follow the steps to search the database of high schools. Then select the high school [from which you received your high school diploma/from which you received a certificate of attendance or completion/you last attended]. Include only traditional or alternative schools for teenage students. If you attended an adult high school completion program to prepare for a GED or other high school equivalency, think back to the high school you attended before that.

For high schools in the United States and Puerto Rico:

1. First type in the full high school name in the first textbox. Do not enter abbreviations.
2. Select the state where the school is located from the dropdown box.
3. Type in the city or choose a city by clicking the "List cities" button.
4. Click the "ENTER" button to display a list of schools matching your responses.
 - 4a. If the correct school is shown, click the "Select" button next to it.
 - 4b. If the correct school is not shown, try the search again, this time removing the city name. If the correct school is still not listed, click the "None of the above" button and answer the questions shown.

For high schools outside of the U.S. or U.S. Territories:

1. First type in the full high school name in the first textbox. Do not enter abbreviations.
2. Select FOREIGN COUNTRY from the state dropdown box.
3. Type in the city.
4. Click the "ENTER" button.
5. Provide the requested information.

Traditional high schools are public or private high schools that most teenage students attend.

Alternative high schools are public schools attended by teenagers who do not do well at a traditional high school because they do poorly in their courses, get in trouble, are absent a lot, or have other difficulties. Alternative high schools may have different types of teaching, schedules, or services to help students.

Adult high school completion programs prepare students to take the exam for the GED or another high school equivalency (for example, HiSET, TASC, NEDP, AHSD - Adult High School Diploma). Two examples are Adult Secondary Education (ASE) programs and the National External Diploma Program (NEDP), but there are many others. These programs are for people who are not attending a public or private high school and are often taken through a community college, an adult education organization, or online. If you attended an adult high school completion program to prepare for a GED or other high school equivalency, think back to the high school you attended before that.

In the next section we will ask about education after high school. [When answering these questions, do not include [the college or trade school classes you took while you were still in high school/your adult high school completion program/the college or trade school classes you took while you were still in high school or your adult high school completion program].]

We will use the term “college or trade school” to include colleges and universities as well as any schools that provide occupational training. This includes:

- 4-year colleges and universities
- 2-year colleges, junior colleges, and community colleges
- Trade schools, technical institutes, and vocational schools which usually offer programs that take less than 2 years to complete (for example, culinary institutes and cosmetology schools)

Bachelor's degree: A bachelor's degree is usually awarded by a 4-year college or university and usually requires at least 4 years of full-time, college-level work. If you were in a joint bachelor's and graduate program, select "Bachelor's degree program (usually a 4-year degree)."

Associate's degree: An associate's degree normally requires at least 2, but less than 4 years, of full-time equivalent college work. Include university transfer programs.

Certificate or diploma from a school that provides occupational training: Certificates or diplomas usually take less than two years to complete and are usually designed to give people the skills needed for direct entry to employment in a trade or to earn a license such as a cosmetology license. Other examples include certificates in administrative support, computer programming, and medical records. A certificate is different from a certification or license. Certificates are typically awarded for life (like a degree). On the other hand, certifications and licenses are typically time-limited and have to be renewed. Include certificates, but do not include certifications or licenses. Also, do not include certificates of attendance or participation in a short-term training (for example, 1 day).

Not working on a degree or certificate, but taking undergraduate classes: This means taking courses at the bachelor's level or below, but not formally enrolling in a bachelor's, associate's, or certificate program.

Graduate program or classes (for example, Master's or PhD): This means enrollment in a master's program (for example, MA, MS, MBA) or doctoral program (for example, Ph.D., Ed.D, MD, JD) or taking classes at that level. If you were enrolled in a joint bachelor's and graduate program, select "Bachelor's degree program (usually a 4-year degree)."

Bachelor's degree: A bachelor's degree is usually awarded by a 4-year college or university and usually requires at least 4 years of full-time, college-level work. If you were in a joint bachelor's and graduate program, select "Bachelor's degree program (usually a 4-year degree)."

Associate's degree: An associate's degree normally requires at least 2, but less than 4 years, of full-time equivalent college work. Include university transfer programs.

Certificate or diploma from a school that provides occupational training: Certificates or diplomas usually take less than two years to complete and are usually designed to give people the skills needed for direct entry to employment in a trade or to earn a license such as a cosmetology license. Other examples include certificates in administrative support, computer programming, and medical records. A certificate is different from a certification or license. Certificates are typically awarded for life (like a degree). On the other hand, certifications and licenses are typically time-limited and have to be renewed. Include certificates, but do not include certifications or licenses. Also, do not include certificates of attendance or participation in a short-term training (for example, 1 day).

Not working on a degree or certificate, but taking undergraduate classes: This means taking courses at the bachelor's level or below, but not formally enrolling in a bachelor's, associate's, or certificate program.

Graduate program or classes (for example, Master's or PhD): This means enrollment in a master's program (for example, MA, MS, MBA) or doctoral program (for example, Ph.D., Ed.D, MD, JD) or taking classes at that level. If you were enrolled in a joint bachelor's and graduate program, select "Bachelor's degree program (usually a 4-year degree)."

By the end of [date last attended reference institution (through February 2016)], had you ever taken out any private student loans from a private lender for your college or trade school education? Do not include any money borrowed in federal loans or any money borrowed from family or friends in your answer. (Private student loans are borrowed from a private lender, such as a bank, credit union, or state, usually require a co-signer and have market interest rates based on credit history. Click here for examples of private loans.)

Indicate whether you received any type of private or alternative loans from a private lender for your college or trade school education. [Include private loans for all schools you attended.] Do not include federal loans, Parent PLUS loans, grants or scholarships, or money borrowed from family or friends.

Private loans, also known as alternative loans, are offered by private lenders. Some common characteristics of private loans include:

- With private loans there are no federal application forms to complete.
- Some students and parents use private loans as a supplement when their federal loans do not provide enough money.
- Private loans can have higher interest rates than federal loans.
- Unlike federal student loans, private loans are credit based and therefore often require a cosigner if the student does not have an established credit history.

Some examples of commonly used private loans include:

- Sallie Mae Smart Option Loan
- Wells Fargo Collegiate Loan
- Discover Student Loan
- Loans from credit unions
- Loans from states such as Minnesota's SELF loan

States with private or alternative student loan programs include Alaska, Connecticut, Georgia, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas, and Vermont.

Home equity loans are not considered private loans.

1. In the first text box, type in the title of the job (for example, auto mechanic or hair stylist).
2. In the second text box, type in a few words or phrases describing the tasks you complete on this job most often (for example, diagnose problems with cars and trucks and make repairs; shampoo, cut, color and style hair)
3. Click the "ENTER" button to display options that are the best match with the job title and tasks you typed in.
4. Review the descriptions of the options shown.

- If no options are shown (you will see three dropdown boxes, but not job titles), check your spelling in the text boxes and repeat the process. If no options are shown again, go to step 5.
