Such writing shall be sufficiently specific to enable the receiving party to identify the information considered to be proprietary by the disclosing party.

B. Information shall not be deemed proprietary, and the receiving party shall have no obligation with respect to any such information, which:

- (i) is already known to the receiving party as evidenced by prior documentation thereof; or

E. Notwithstanding anything herein to the contrary, the Receiving Party hereto may disclose Proprietary Information in the event that such party hereto becomes legally compelled or required to disclose the information to any person, entity, court, administrative agency, or other governmental authority provided that Receiving Party shall give the Disclosing Party hereto prompt notice so that Disclosing Party, at its own costs, may seek a protective order prior to disclosure or other appropriate remedy and/or waive compliance with this Agreement. If Disclosing Party fails to seek such protective order within 30 days of notice from Receiving Party under this paragraph, then Receiving Party may disclose that portion of the Proprietary Information which it is required or compelled to disclose.

F. Nothing contained in this Agreement shall be construed (i) as requiring a party to disclose to the other party, or to accept from the other party, any particular information or (ii) as granting to a party a license, either express or implied, under any patent, copyright, trade secret, or other intellectual property right now or hereafter owned, obtained, or licensable by the other party.
