Market Claims in DTC Advertisements
Informed Consent

[Consent Screen 1]

Ipsos, a national market research and public opinion firm, is conducting a research study on behalf of a public health agency to gain a better understanding of how consumers perceive advertisements (ads) that appear in magazines and newspapers.

The study will involve viewing a prescription drug ad and answering questions related to the ad. Your answers are private and confidential. No one will ever be able to connect your name with these answers. Your input is extremely valuable. There is no direct benefit to you for participating. However, you may find the interview to be informative or interesting. Your responses are very important because they will help researchers understand how people make decisions about medications. There are no known risks to participating in this study. While the survey questions we ask are not meant to be sensitive, there is always a chance that you may feel uncomfortable with some of the questions. You do not have to answer any question that you don't want to answer. There is also a potential risk of loss of confidentiality. Every effort will be made to protect your information, but this cannot be guaranteed.

If you have questions about this survey, please contact Dr. Aysha Keisler, the project director. She can be reached between 9 AM and 5 PM Eastern Standard Time Monday – Friday at (202)-420-2021.

This study will take about 30 minutes to complete and you will earn 180 iSay points in appreciation of your time. We ask that you complete the survey in one sitting (without taking any breaks) to avoid distractions.
