Pop-up Help:

To assist users in selecting the correct service type, the following list provides examples of applications for the service types referenced in question 4.b.i. The following list is meant to provide guidance and is not intended to be an exhaustive of service types eligible to use this form. You may still use this form to submit a commercial interference complaint even if you are not included in the example applications described below.

Cellular/SMR (800 MHz band), PCS (1850-1995 MHz), Advance Wireless Systems (AWS) (1710 – 2200 MHz), 700 / 600 MHz Wireless Broadband, and Wireless Communications Services (WCS) (2305 – 2360 MHz) are the license types most commonly used by wireless carriers for providing mobile telephony and broadband service to end users.

BRS/ERS (2.5 GHz) are services used to provide high-speed, high-capacity broadband service, including two-way Internet service via cellularized communication systems. Such services provide consumers integrated access to voice, high-speed data, video-on-demand, and interactive delivery services from a wireless device.

Part 90 (Land Mobile – Business/Industrial) services are private land mobile radio systems that often share frequencies with other users, including public safety agencies, utilities, railroads, manufacturers, delivery companies, landscapers, building maintenance firms, and others. The services included in Land Mobile are Public Safety, Business/Industrial, Private Land Mobile Paging, and Radiolocation.

Point-to-Point Microwave stations are authorized under Part 101 of the Commission’s rules and authorize communications along a specific path.

Both full-power Broadcast (AM/FM/TV/LPFM) stations and low power Broadcast (Radio and TV Translators/LPTV) stations operate on discrete bands and provide free, over-the-air service to audiences in the communities they are licensed to serve.

Broadcast Auxiliary (STL, RPU) stations are used to transport audio and video content to and from a station’s studio, either for production purposes or broadcast using the station’s transmitter.

Broadcast Weather Radar stations enable radio and television broadcasters to collect and disseminate real-time weather data.

Stations in the Satellite service are classified as either terrestrial (“Earth Stations”) or orbital (“Space Stations”), and devices in this service that may experience interference include satellites in orbit, fixed Earth Stations with large antenna dishes, and handheld satellite telephones.
