

NSF Science Community Outreach Survey (PILOT)

Introduction

The National Science Foundation (NSF) is conducting a survey to understand how we can improve our communications with YOU, members of our scientific community (Students, Researchers, Staff, Professors, etc)

The survey takes about 7 minutes to complete and will help us provide you with information regarding funding opportunities, research news, announcements and other information you may be seeking from NSF via email, our website, and social media.

Slide on past the penguins to take the survey now!

1. How do you most often hear or learn about information from NSF? Select all that apply.

- From the NSF website
- From a colleague
- Through communications from my institution
- Through communications from scientific societies or associations
- From an NSF booth or session at a conference
- From NSF's social media
- From an NSF program officer

NSF 101

NSF is creating an informational series called "NSF 101" to answer some commonly asked questions. One example of this is through short explainer videos. Please watch this one-minute pilot video about funding for early-career researchers and then answer the following questions.

12. How useful did you find this NSF 101 video about Early-Career Researcher funding?

- Very useful
- Somewhat useful
- Not at all useful

Do you have any comments about this video?

13. How likely would you share this video with colleagues or friends who are early career researchers looking for funding?

- Very likely
- Somewhat likely
- Not at all likely

14. Given the choice, would you prefer this information in a video, a short blog post, or webinar?

- Video
- Blog post
- Webinar
