Daily Report of Specific Issues ad hoc

FR 2004SD ad hoc
OMB No. 7100-0003

Timing of FR 2004SD ac hoc data collection:

On occasion, there may be a need to collect information within a short timeframe for a short period of time from primary dealers. The dealers would be notified in advance and any data requested or required would be readily available. These data could be reported as frequently as daily until dealers were notified to discontinue reporting.

Topics covered by the FR 2004SD ad hoc reporting form may include:

Written qualitative questions might include categorical questions, yes-no questions, ordinal questions, and open-ended questions. Written quantitative questions would include dollar amounts, percentages, numbers of items, interest rates, and other such information. These data would not be available from any other source. The Federal Reserve would collect up to 10 ad hoc data items from all respondents that generally would pertain to specific securities, asset classes, or financing transactions.
