

BITM Eligibility Survey

Thank you for your interest in the Backyard Integrated Tick Management study. This is a joint study between Western Connecticut State University's Tickborne Disease Prevention Laboratory, the University of Rhode Island, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. This study seeks to better understand if tickborne diseases, such as Lyme disease, can be prevented with the use of Integrated Tick Management, which includes pesticide sprays and bait boxes (a rodent-targeted method of tick control).

The following survey will be used to help determine if your household meets the necessary criteria for inclusion in the study. By answering the questions on this survey you are indicating your interest to participate, but you are under no obligation to enroll in the study. We sincerely thank you for your time and interest to help us research new methods for protecting human health. If your household meets the eligibility criteria, our study coordinator will follow-up with you about enrolling in the study.
