Dear <COORDINATOR NAME>:

The National Science Foundation (NSF) and the National Institutes of Health (NIH) would like to thank you for your participation in the Survey of Graduate Students and Postdoctorates in Science and Engineering (GSS) in recent years.

We have recently revisited our eligibility requirements for the schools that participate in the GSS. Because of this some schools will be removed from the GSS while others will be added. Unfortunately, your school is no longer eligible to be included in the GSS. As such, we will not be requesting your participation in the 2017 GSS data collection.

If you have questions about your school no longer being eligible to participate in the GSS survey, please contact Jennifer Pauli, RTI International, toll-free at (866) 558-0781 or by email at gss@rti.org. You can also contact Michael Yamaner, NSF Project Officer, at (703) 292-7815 or myamaner@nsf.gov.

Thank you again for your participation and we look forward to the possibility of working with your school in the future.

Dear <COORDINATOR NAME>:

A few weeks ago, we contacted your institution regarding the Survey of Graduate Students and Postdoctorates in Science, Engineering (GSS) for the National Science Foundation (NSF) and the National Institutes of Health (NIH). After reviewing the information provided by «COORDINATOR NAME» at your institution, «SCHOOL NAME» was determined to be eligible for the 2017 GSS. Your university will join the other 700 institutions that are asked each year to participate in the GSS.

The 2017 survey round will begin soon. We will be contacting your school coordinator, «COORDINATOR_NAME» again for the survey. If there is someone else who can help us with this year's survey, please let us know. We need your institution's participation in this survey to ensure the accuracy and validity of important national estimates. The deadline for submission for the 2017 GSS data is February 28, 2018.

The GSS, conducted annually since the 1960s, is a national survey of all postsecondary institutions in the U.S. and its territories that grant graduate degrees in science (including some social sciences), engineering and health fields (SEH). The results of this survey are used to assess shifts in graduate enrollment, postdoctoral appointments and trends in financial support. Last year, over 99% of institutions provided the requested information. This exceptional level of participation enables us to produce reliable statistics for use by federal, state, and local governments. Academic researchers and planners use GSS data to compare their institution's characteristics to those of their peer institutions.

If you have questions about the survey, please contact Ms. Jennifer Pauli, RTI International, toll-free at (866) 558-0781 or by email at gss@rti.org. You can also contact Michael Yamaner, NSF Project Officer at myamaner@nsf.gov or (703) 292-7815.

Thank you in advance for your institution's participation in GSS and contribution to these important national statistics.

Dear <PRESIDENT NAME>, <TITLE>:

Every year, approximately 700 postsecondary institutions are asked to complete the Survey of Graduate Students and Postdoctorates in Science and Engineering (GSS) sponsored by the National Science Foundation (NSF) and the National Institutes of Health (NIH). Over 99 percent of these institutions choose to respond to the survey. This level of participation enables us to produce reliable statistics for use by federal, state, and local governments.

I would like to ask for your help with your institution's participation in this year's survey. The 2017 GSS began earlier this month. In the past, we contacted <2015 COORDINATOR NAME> to complete the GSS for <SCHOOL NAME> but did not receive a response. If there is someone else who can help us with this year's survey, please let us know. The deadline for submission for this year's GSS data is February 28, 2018. Please note that the published GSS report that displays the institution-level data will not list the institutions that do not respond to the GSS.

One of the most important uses of the GSS data is the preparation of NSF's congressionally mandated Science & Engineering Indicators report. Another important use of the GSS data is in Women, Minorities and Persons with Disabilities in Science and Engineering report. <SCHOOL NAME>'s response to the GSS is important in maintaining the integrity and validity of this critical information resource that measures enrollment and workforce trends in the fields of science, engineering, and health.

If you have any questions, please contact Jennifer Pauli at RTI at gss@rti.org or (919) 485-5598. You can also contact Michael Yamaner NSF Project Officer at myamaner@nsf.gov or (703) 292-7815.

We hope we can count on your institution's participation and support of the GSS this year.

The extended deadline is March 21, 2018 for submitting the 2016 Survey of Graduate Students in Science and Engineering (GSS). We would appreciate your commitment to complete and submit your institution's GSS data by that date.

For institutions that miss this deadline, we need to send letters to the institution Presidents to let them know that the survey responses are incomplete so we can enlist their assistance. Your response by the 19th will help us minimize that follow-up effort.

As we near the final stage of the 2017 GSS data collection, we want to make sure to include <SCHOOL NAME> counts of graduate student, postdoc and nonfaculty researcher in our annual reports and databases.

Please login to the GSS web survey and complete the survey by March 21, 2018:

Dear <COORDINATOR NAME>,

In early April, we will begin the final survey follow-up efforts that include sending a letter to the President of your institution requesting assistance and cooperation in obtaining the current data from your institution for the 2017 NSF-NIH Survey of Graduate Students and Postdoctorates in Science and Engineering (GSS). Although the survey deadline has passed, we are reluctant to close this year's survey without your institution's data. We are offering you the final opportunity to respond to the 2017 GSS.

As you know, your institution is one of over 700 institutions that contribute to our annual estimates on the present and future size of the science and engineering labor force. The soundness of decisions that draw on these statistics depends on the GSS data being complete and accurate.

One of the most important uses of the GSS data is the preparation of NSF's congressionally mandated Science & Engineering Indicators report. Another important use of the GSS data is in the Women, Minorities and Persons with Disabilities in Science and Engineering report. GSS data are also used in the Academic Institution Profiles.

Please help us by submitting <SCHOOL NAME>'s GSS data as soon as possible. Information to access the web survey is below.

Jennifer Pauli of RTI will be contacting you in the next week or so to find out whether you will be able to submit the 2017 GSS before a letter is sent to your president's office. You can also email her at gss@rti.org, or call her at (919) 485-5598 or toll-free at (866) 558-0781.

We look forward to your institution's continued participation in this important national study.

Sincerely,

Dear <PRESIDENT NAME>:

We are writing to enlist your help for the 2017 Survey of Graduate Students and Postdoctorates in Science and Engineering (GSS). As of today, we have not received your institution's response to the GSS, and we are reluctant to close this year's survey without the data from <INSTITUTION NAME>.

<COORDINATOR NAME> serves as your institution's GSS coordinator. We would appreciate anything you can do to help <COORDINATOR NAME> provide the requested information.

If we receive your institution's response by April 21, 2018, we can include your institution in our annual report of trends for approximately 700 colleges and universities. Otherwise, your institution will be left out of the GSS report that displays institution-level data.

The GSS is the only national survey that collects department-level information about graduate enrollment, postdoc appointments, and nonfaculty research positions in science, engineering, and health fields. The soundness of policy and other decisions based on the GSS results depends heavily on the efforts of your staff to provide complete and accurate data.

If you have any questions, please contact Michael Yamaner, NSF Project Officer, at myamaner@nsf.gov or (703) 292-7815.

We value your support of the GSS and the efforts of your staff in responding to the survey.

Dear <PRESIDENT NAME>:

On behalf of the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health, we want to recognize the efforts of <COORDINATOR NAME> as <INSTITUTION NAME>'s school coordinator(s) for the 2017 Survey of Graduate Students and Postdoctorates in Science and Engineering (GSS).

Without the accurate and timely work of our GSS coordinators at approximately 800 postsecondary institutions nationwide, we would not be able to compile our annual statistics on graduate enrollment, postdocs, and nonfaculty researchers in science, engineering, and health fields. We appreciate the extra efforts of your staff outside of their assigned workloads.

Thank you so much for your continuing support of the NSF-NIH Survey of Graduate Students and Postdoctorates in Science and Engineering.

Sincerely,
