Instructions

The performance competencies that are included below have been vetted through Naval Officer SME's using an iterative process. The focus was to identify areas that are known to contribute significantly to success as an NROTC midshipman and as a Naval Officer.

Please keep in mind that when evaluating the candidate on each performance competency that it is important to separate information gathered from other items or general impressions from the information obtained solely for the competency in question. In other words, when rating Propensity to Serve (the first performance competency) use only information collected during the response to that question to evaluate the candidate's Propensity to Serve. Performance competencies include: a) Propensity to Serve, b) Embracing a Healthy Lifestyle, c) Communication, d) Teamwork/Interpersonal Relations, and e) Judgment/Decision-making.

A final category, Overall Suitability, is included to provide the interviewer's assessment of the candidate's likelihood of performing successfully as an undergraduate NROTC midshipman and a future Naval Officer. The judgment for rating this category should be based on all of the information available to the interviewer as a result of the interview process. Utilize the information gathered and the ratings provided for the individual performance competencies to inform the Overall Suitability rating; however do not simply use the arithmetic average of these categories.
