Let's

Improve Our

- How healthy are Americans?
- How are we dealing with chronic health problems such as asthma, diabetes, and high blood pressure?
- Are health promotion and disease prevention efforts working?
- Are Americans eating the right foods, or do we need more vitamins or minerals in our diet?

- How can we continue to improve the health of our children?

Survey provides answers

We all need answers to these and other key health questions. One of the most important ways we can find answers is through the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES).

This unique study gathers information from people all over the United States to learn more about the health of the Nation. It is the only survey that combines health interview and examination data to produce an in-depth picture of the health of the U.S. population.

The National Center for Health Statistics (NCHS) conducts the study. NCHS is part of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). NCHS monitors the health of the Nation through NHANES and other studies.

NHANES teams travel across the United States

The first of these national studies was conducted in the early 1960s. Today, the government sends teams of doctors, dentists, nutritionists, and other trained medical personnel to 15 communities across the country each year. At each location, NHANES health representatives knock on people's doors and ask them questions about their health and diet.

We invite about 7,000 people each year to come to the NHANES mobile examination center for a health exam. Highly trained professional staff these traveling health centers where they use state-of-the-art medical equipment.

When NHANES comes to your town

We always notify local and state health officials before each study begins. And you may hear about us on local television and radio or read about NHANES in your newspaper before anyone knocks on your door. The Director of the National Center for Health Statistics also sends a letter to every household we select before our arrival.

Provide Important Information

Participation is easy

We can schedule the health interview in your home at your convenience. The tests are free, and all who take part receive a cash payment in appreciation for their time and effort. You will also receive a report of your test results if you choose. We even arrange for travel to the mobile center and pay for babysitting for those who need it. Your appointment can also be set at a time convenient for you.

Along with the cash payment and test results comes the satisfaction of knowing that your joining in can help all people enjoy a healthier future.

We do not ask everyone in a community or everyone in a household to volunteer. Our survey experts use scientific techniques to help find a sample of people who represent the Nation. To ensure the accuracy of the results, we need to reach as many homes selected for the sample as possible. Once selected, we cannot replace you with anyone else. We need you.

Over the years, more than 160,000 people have taken part in NHANES.

Interview asks about diet and health

At your home, our health representative asks questions about your health care, health conditions, and diet. Questions at the mobile center include information about physical fitness, weight, and eating habits.

Enjoy a Healthier Future

Help us learn more about our Nation's health

Exam includes many familiar and state-of-the-art tests

Those invited to the mobile center will have medical and dental tests. These may include checking hearing, height and weight, blood pressure and pulse, analyzing laboratory work, assessing muscle strength, bone composition, and other tests—all done by a skilled medical staff.

The tests can take 1 to 4 hours depending on your age—past participants have considered this time well spent. The health measurements are taken using the most up-to-date methods. You may learn important facts that can help you and your doctors take steps to improve your health.

NHANES findings benefit all

You won't be the only one who benefits from the results. The study's record of success for more than 50 years is remarkable. Here are just a few of the ways that everyone's willingness to take part has helped us all:

The growth charts that doctors use to track children's development from infancy to teenage years grew out of the first NHANES programs. These charts now are used world-wide.

Our studies showed widespread high levels of lead in people's blood. These findings laid the groundwork for getting lead banned from gasoline and from food and soft drink cans. Blood lead levels now are down more than 70 percent from the 1970s.

Good reasons you should take part in NHANES:

- Obtain free health measurements
- Receive payment for your participation
- Receive a report of your findings
- Learn more about your health
- All information is kept confidential
- Add to Nation's health knowledge

NHANES provided warning signals about the growing health problems linked with overweight among Americans young and old.

The study has shown the number of problems caused by undiagnosed diabetes. In response, the government and health groups expanded efforts to increase awareness about diabetes, especially among minority populations.

Vitamins, calcium, and minerals have been added to foods to help prevent poor nutrition identified by NHANES.

Cholesterol levels and high blood pressure have been reduced because of programs based on NHANES data.

We expect the latest NHANES to continue this record of success and to enhance the health of the Nation.

When you go to the mobile exam center, you are doing the right thing for yourself—and doing a good turn for your family, neighbors, community, and the Nation as a whole. This study is vital to our health. Thank you for making it possible.
