

Attachment 12 (revised 03.10.17):
BUILD Student Annual Follow-up Survey

You have been selected to be a part of a national study on student experiences. Your school is part of the Diversity Program Consortium, a national effort funded by the National Institutes of Health to improve the educational and career success of students and faculty. By taking time to complete this survey, you will help increase knowledge and improve education for the next generation of students.

The University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA) serves as the coordinating center of this national effort and is in charge of collecting information about the experiences and career choices of a variety of students. It will be important to compare students at your school to those at other institutions.

Your school has provided UCLA your name and contact information. You may have previously contributed to this effort by completing one of the national student surveys offered at your institution this past academic year. By taking this survey, you are giving permission for your school to share information from your student record such as demographics, the courses you take, and the grades you receive in your courses with the UCLA team. You are also giving the UCLA team permission to share the information you provide with your institution for research purposes and to contact you every year or so for follow-up surveys to understand your career choices after you leave your school. Only with the continued participation and support of students such as yourself will we be able to show the value of the various programs offered through your institution to help students such as yourself succeed. All of the information you provide will be protected and secured to the extent permitted by law.

In this survey, we will ask you about publications and grants. You have the option to upload a document that includes such information (such as a resume) instead of entering this information directly for each publication or grant in the survey.

Public reporting burden for this collection of information is estimated to average 25 minutes per response, including the time for reviewing instructions, searching existing data sources, gathering and maintaining the data needed, and completing and reviewing the collection of information. Send comments regarding this burden estimate or any other aspect of this collection of information, including suggestions for reducing this burden, to: NIH, Project Clearance Branch, 6705 Rockledge Drive, MSC 7974, Bethesda, MD 20892-7974, ATTN: PRA (0925-0747*). This next section concerns your experiences with mentoring in a variety of contexts.

A mentor is someone who provides guidance, assistance, and encouragement on professional and academic issues. A mentor can be either someone who is more experienced (or senior) than you or someone who is at an education or professional level similar to you (a "peer").

A mentee is someone who receives guidance or assistance from a mentor. A mentee can be someone less experienced (or junior) than you or someone who is your peer.

A mentoring relationship can be formal (with a set schedule and perhaps arranged by your institution) or informal.

First, we would like to ask you about a mentor who is senior to you. Do you have a faculty member or someone else who is more senior than you whom you consider a mentor ?

No
