After YEARS of horrible pain, I couldn't take it anymore and opted for surgery in 2018. It was one of the hardest things I've gone through physically, but I'm so grateful it was a success. That's why, when the Food and Drug Administration asked for my help (well technically, YOUR help!) on a study that's looking at prescription drug materials for endometriosis, I jumped at the opportunity to partner with them. PLEASE take 20 minutes to complete the survey that's linked in my bio!! Your personal information will be kept private and they won't share it with others. Your feedback is super important, and you'll be helping advance some really meaningful work. Bonus? To thank you for your time, you'll be entered to win a $XXX cash prize, just for completing the survey! #endometriosiswarrior

It's not all pretty photos and filters. I try to be very open behind the scenes on my life...because REAL LIFE happens. Until I started talking about my journey with #endometriosis, I never realized so many others had dealt with it too. I'm grateful I stopped putting off surgery in 2018, and that the surgery was a success! Now, I'm partnering with the Food and Drug Administration on a study that's looking at prescription drug materials for endometriosis. We need YOUR help! Please take a few moments to complete the survey linked in my bio. 🙏 You'll be entered to win a $XXX cash prize AND the satisfaction of knowing you're contributing to important research! 😊 #endometriosiswarrior
