National Health Interview Survey

A Healthier America Begins With You

Our Responsibilities to You

We Answer Your Questions

Your U.S. Census Bureau interviewer is happy to answer any questions you may have about the survey.

We Ensure Your Safety

All of our interviewers carry photo ID cards. To verify Census Bureau staff, you can also visit <https://www.census.gov/staffsearch>.

We Respect Your Time

Interviews can be arranged at a time convenient for you.

We Guard Your Privacy

Your information is protected by strict federal laws. Your answers are combined with others and used only for health research.

You are in Charge

You decide what information you want to provide. You choose which questions to answer. Most people find the questions interesting and easy to answer.

NHIS is conducted by the National Center for Health Statistics.
The U.S. Census Bureau is the NHIS data collection agent.

NHIS is a survey that has monitored the health of our nation since 1957. Learn more.

NATIONAL HEALTH INTERVIEW SURVEY (NHIS)

What Is NHIS?

NHIS is the primary source of information on the nation's health. As the country's largest in-person household health survey, NHIS has been taking the pulse of the nation since 1957.

The Trusted Gold Standard

NHIS data are used to:

- Monitor progress toward national health objectives
- Evaluate health policies and programs
- Track changes in health behaviors and health care use

Covers Key Topics of National Importance

- Medical conditions
- Health insurance coverage
- Doctor's office visits
- Behaviors that impact health

An Opportunity for You

Over the years, thousands of families across your community, state, and country have helped the nation by participating in this survey. Now is your chance to help.

To make an appointment to participate in NHIS, call the phone number on the letter you received.

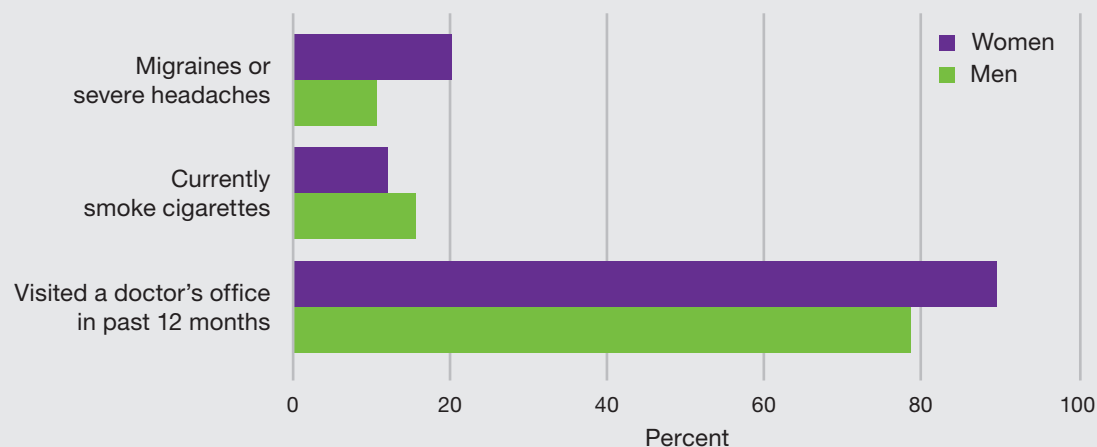

Each Selected Household Is Important

The chances of being selected for this survey are small. Once selected, each household represents thousands of others. Your household is irreplaceable.

We are happy to fit into your schedule. Interviews can be conducted at a time convenient for you.
