A Breakthrough Series Collaborative for Engaging Fathers and Paternal Relatives in Child Welfare

The purpose of the information collection is to understand the extent to which improvement teams have engaged in Breakthrough Series Collaborative (BSC) activities. The Fathers and Continuous Learning in Child Welfare (FCL) project team will use this information to better understand your current organizational structure and help identify teams with similar and different strengths and challenges.

The average estimated public reporting burden for this collection of information is about 20 minutes per domain. Providing this information is voluntary, and all responses that are collected will be kept private to the extent permitted by law. This report will be completed once at the beginning of the BSC and once at the end. Improvement teams will submit one completed form per team.

An agency may not conduct or sponsor, and a person is not required to respond to, a collection of information unless it displays a currently valid OMB control number. The OMB number for this information collection is 0970-0531 and the expiration date is 07/31/2022.

Purpose

This self-assessment tool is designed to help your improvement team evaluate the systems and processes you currently have in place to help engage fathers and paternal relatives. It is organized based on the five key domains described in the Collaborative Change Framework. We recognize that your team is a partnership that includes individuals who facilitate different kinds of engagement with fathers and paternal relatives. Thus, this self-assessment can help do the following for your team:

1. Help consider the multiple components of effective father and paternal relative engagement.
2. Construct a shared frame of reference and develop a common language and understanding about the level of functioning of your organization across the five domains of the collaborative change framework.
3. Identify key successes, challenges, and priority areas for improvement.

The results of this self-assessment will be shared with the FCL project team, faculty coaches, and other advisors who will be supporting your team throughout the collaborative. This will develop their understanding of your current organization and enhance their ability to coach your team effectively and efficiently.

We will also share these self-assessments across teams at Learning Session 1 and at the end of Session 3 to help teams identify areas of strength and areas for improvement. After completing the self-assessment, your team should think about priorities based on your identified areas of need.

Your team might even generate ideas and strategies for change during this self-assessment process. Keep track of those change ideas, and bring them to the first learning session to share with the group. The tool is not intended to help you think about how to improve, however; it is designed to help you assess your current organization and teams.

Instructions

- It is important that the members of your improvement team complete this tool together.
- Each table below outlines one of the five domains identified in the collaborative change framework. Each domain is broken down into goals and the strength of progress toward goals is being evaluated on a four-point scale.
- Use your judgment to determine how well your organization performs in each domain. We encourage you to be honest about where your organization is right now recognizing that different agencies and organizations can have different strengths and areas for opportunity. This exercise will help the team prioritize the areas needing the most attention and to building an improvement plan. You will complete this initial self-assessment and then use this tool again to reassess your progress at specific points in time over the course of the collaborative.

- For each practice, please use the “Comments” section to note specific examples or to explain why you chose the score you did.
