

CIP ADMINISTRATOR WEB SURVEY

The Office of Planning, Research, and Evaluation and the Children's Bureau funded James Bell Associates, the American Bar Association Center for on Children and the Law, and Co-Principal Investigators Drs. Alicia Summers and Sophie Gatowski to plan for a future study or studies that will examine the factors associated with judicial decision-making and hearing quality in child welfare cases, and the influence those factors may have on judges' reasonable efforts decisions and case outcomes. This survey is an opportunity to learn more about the timing of court hearings and the use of pre-hearing conferences in your state to help inform potential site engagement for a future study or studies.

The survey should take 10-15 minutes to complete. Your participation in the survey is voluntary. You may refuse to take part in the research or exit the survey at any time without penalty. You may decline to answer any question you do not wish to answer for any reason. There are no foreseeable risks involved in participating in the survey. You will receive no direct benefits from participating in this research study. However, your responses will help us learn more about child welfare court practices in your state and identify potential sites for future research about how hearing quality factors affect judicial decisions and outcomes in child welfare cases.

Your survey responses will be sent to a link on the Qualtrics survey platform where data will be stored in a password protected electronic format. The survey asks you to identify your state to help inform potential site engagement for a future study or studies. Survey responses you provide may be associated with the name of your state and included in a report shared within OPRE and the Administration for Children and Families (ACF). ACF will use the data to inform future research and planning. Information from this study may be securely shared with qualified researchers to help guide future research and support program improvement.

At the end of the survey you will also be asked if you are interested in participating in a telephone interview and if yes, to provide your email address. Telephone interviews are opportunities to connect with you should researchers have any follow-up questions. Your responses to this survey will remain private to the extent permitted by law.

If you have questions or concerns about the survey or study, you may contact Co-Principal Investigators Dr. Alicia Summers and Dr. Sophia Gatowski or Project Director Anne Fromknecht.

INTRODUCTION

We are interested in learning about typical practice in child welfare cases in your state. We recognize that states vary in their language in referring to these case types and court processes. Here are some definitions for you use as you answer the survey questions.

Child welfare cases. This refers to cases that involve child abuse and neglect, or juvenile dependency.

Initial hearing. The initial hearing is the very first hearing in a child welfare case, sometimes called a shelter care, preliminary protective, emergency removal, or detention hearing. The main purpose of the initial hearing is to determine whether the child should be placed in or remain in foster care, or remain with or be returned to the parents pending further proceedings.

Review hearing. This refers to any post-disposition review hearing by the court (not to include paper reviews, administrative reviews, or status reviews where a party would not be expected to be present physically or virtually, such as by phone or video conference).

Pre-hearing conference. For this survey we are interested in the process where parties meet before the initial hearing to determine if there are any agreements about plans for placement, services and visitation, among other issues. The pre-hearing conference is a court-based process sometimes used as a method to help prepare the families for court, come to an agreement on specific issues, and clarify outstanding information prior to the initial hearing. Questions in this survey about pre-hearing conferences apply to those held before the initial hearing, not those held before adjudication or disposition hearings.

Please refer to these definitions when you answer the survey questions.
