TITLE OF INFORMATION COLLECTION:

Office of Intramural Training & Education (OITE) – The Mental Health and Well-Being of Biomedical Researchers – Feedback

PURPOSE:

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) carries out and funds biomedical research in an effort to prevent and cure common and rare diseases. We also train the next generation of doctors, researchers, and medical support staff who will improve human health in the future, both across the country and around the world. Navigating school, the career exploration process, research environments, and the stress of national/international news can seem overwhelming and lead us to doubt ourselves just when we need confidence the most. Through workshops and group discussions, the OITE will sponsor a series of monthly virtual programs focused on the health and well-being of biomedical research workforce. Each session will include a lecture, question & answer session, and optional small group discussions facilitated by mental health practitioners.

Fall 2020 through Spring 2021 Workshop Series

- I. Suicide Awareness & Prevention
- II. Mental health and wellness through a cultural lens
- III. Addictive behaviors
- IV. Wellness and wellness assessments
- V. Anxiety and anxiety disorders
- VI. Depression and depressive disorders
- VII. Executive function
- VIII. Psychology of career decision-making
- IX. Trauma (individual and group)
- X. Autism spectrum

DESCRIPTION OF RESPONDENTS:

Participants of the Mental Health and Well-Being of Biomedical Researchers seminar series represent all educational levels, administrative staff, faculty, and other research supervisors at the NIH, universities, and other research institutions. Participants are asked to anonymously complete and submit a feedback form which the OITE will use to make improvements to future presentations and services. The OITE anticipates each session will have approximately 500 registrations. However, the response rate from the participants is estimated to be 50% or less. The numbers presented below are for a 50% response rate of the event attendees.
