Managing Someone's Else's Money: Power of Attorney Guide

Recruitment Communications Plan

The Office for Older Americans will send an opt-in email as well as post the following message to listservs that OA knows are relevant to targeted intermediaries in order to recruit intermediaries and consumers for the Managing Someone Else's Money study. Those who are interested in participating can reply and Fors Marsh Group and the User Research Team will schedule the interviews. In addition to the opt-in email, participants will receive a reminder email the day before their session.

I'm Erin Scheithe, a content specialist in the CFPB's Office for Older Americans. As you know, millions of Americans manage money or property for a loved one who's unable to pay bills or make financial decisions. To help financial caregivers, we released a series of easy-to-understand guides called Managing Someone Else's Money (MSEM).

The MSEM guides are one of the most popular CFPB publications, demonstrating their relevance and effectiveness. But the Office for Older Americans team believes it is important to test our materials regularly with our target audiences to see if they're still hitting the mark, and make improvements based on the feedback we receive. Are you and members of your team interested in reviewing and providing feedback on the guides in a structured interview? Are you able to help connect us with a few consumers who could participate?

We aim to interview about 12 consumers and 12 intermediaries/practitioners about the MSEM guide, either in person or by phone. The interviews would last one hour. We will send a copy of the MSEM guide to review before the interview. Our objective is to include practitioners from different professions, including financial institution employees, senior service providers and attorneys – both elder law focused attorneys and legal services attorneys. We hope to include consumers of all ages who have served as fiduciaries, informal financial caregivers, or those who may serve in this type of role in the future.

If you or members of your team are interested in helping us, please respond to this email. We will provide more detail on what to expect in the coming weeks.

Thank you,

Erin Scheithe
