Consular Services: American Citizen Services Applicant Satisfaction Survey

Purpose

The Bureau of Consular Affairs (CA) currently uses OMB approved survey SV-2013-0003 to assess the level of American citizen customer satisfaction with the consular services provided overseas in U.S. diplomatic and consular missions. That form does not ask questions that refer to operational matters with the specificity needed to determine adequately customer satisfaction at each of the more than 200 consular sections overseas. For example, question 3 combines two very different matters, i.e. obtaining information and obtaining an appointment. Consular sections provide information on the requirements of specific services through multiple channels, i.e. the Department's website, the post's website, the CA/OCS call center, the post's phone system, and email.

CA would like to ask customers which info source they consulted and whether the info was helpful. Given that many American citizens who reside overseas are not fluent in English, CA would also like to determine whether customers sought info in another language. With regard to appointment systems, access to such systems is generally via the internet. In many overseas locations, American citizens have limited access to the internet.

The proposed form would permit CA to aggregate responses to obtain a general satisfaction rating, but it would also allow an individual post to modify specific operational matters to suit better the specific makeup of its locally resident American population.

Description of Respondents

Respondents would generally be American citizens who are applying for a consular service in a U.S. diplomatic or consular mission overseas. In those instances in which the applicant is a minor, respondents would be the minor's parent or legal guardian. Such individuals may not be American citizens.

Respondents who are seeking notarial services may also not be American citizens. A foreigner may request a notarial service if the documents to be notarized are to be used in the United States.

The survey would be provided to applicants who personally visit a U.S. consular office overseas to seek a service available to American citizens. There are approximately 85 of our 240 offices that average 250 applicants per year. For this population of potential respondents, the survey form would be handed out to applicants on paper and data collection would be handled by a clerical employee.

CA is considering obtaining a license to use Survey Monkey or similar technology to be used by respondents who seek services at our larger posts that are located in major urban areas. Should that occur, we will provide additional information to OMB for consideration.
